The Ricker Frame house was constructed during the Civil War era of the mid 1860's. All features on the house were made outstandingly large, including tall double hung wooden sash windows, 14 room in all, 11 foot ceilings on the first floor, and 10 foot ceilings on the second floor. A large winding staircase leads to the second level. Large French windows and doors decorate the façade. Four corbeled brick interior chimneys add to the extravagance of the architecture.

Jason Hanks was the man responsible for having the home built. At the time of construction, he was a prominent businessman, owning three tanneries, and they were located in Chaneyville, Gilpintown, and Everett. Meriweather and Ladew were the contractors who actually built the home.

The Ricker Frame House stands out as an example of the type of home that deviated from the normal "L" shaped weatherboard frame structure found in the rural parts of Allegany County. These unique rural dwellings were usually only found among the more prosperous people of the county.

RICKER FRAME HOUSE

AL-II-A-067

.1 mile south of Route 40, Flintstone
1860 - 1870

The Ricker Frame House is a large, two story, three bay wide frame house that stands out as an example of the type of home that deviated from the normal "L" shaped weatherboard frame structure found in the rural parts of Allegany County. It features very tall six over six lights, four original corbeled brick chimneys, and French doors and windows on the facade. Jason Hanks, a prominent tannery operator, had the house constructed around 1865.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Ricker Frame House is located .1 mile south of Route 40 in Flintstone.

The rectangular shaped house is two stories tall, three bays wide, and rests on a low brick foundation. There is a plain water table. Wall construction consists of clapboards with plain features. Windows include double hung wooden sash frames with six over six lights. The first story on the north end of the house features two French windows with 10 lights each. The main entrance faces north and has an original French door with a transom light. The roof is hipped and is covered with tin and tar. Square modillions approximately 18 inches long are spaced every two feet under the eaves. One bay hipped roof porches are found on the east, west and south sides of the structure. A balcony lies on top of the porch on the west side. The north end of the house has a three bay front end porch with a hipped roof supported by four tapered square columns. One gabled dormer lies in the center of the roof on the north side. The house also features four original corbeled brick chimneys to the interior of the structure.

The Ricker Frame House appears today as it did when built around 1865. It stands structurally sound and is in good condition.
