CARDER FRAME HOUSE
Oldtown, Maryland
ca. 1850

The Carder House was originally a one story clapboard building with six over six lights and a single brick chimney located in the interior of the house. It has since been covered with red insul brick. Despite its railroad tie foundation, which is a deviation from the norm, the Carder House is similar to many of the more primitive dwellings in the County.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Carder Frame House is located 3.3 miles southeast of Oldtown along Maryland Route 51.

The house is one and a half stories tall and four bays wide, being of rectangular shape. The wall construction was originally clapboard, but has since been re-covered with red insul brick. The foundation is a high one consisting of railroad ties. Windows all around the house are double hung wooden sash frames with six over six lights and plain trim. Rafter ends are exposed under the eaves of the gabled roof. The rear entrance is covered by a gabled hood. Featured also is one original brick chimney located to the interior of the house.

The house is generally in poor condition. The original appearance has been altered with the addition of the red insul brick siding and newer asphalt shingles on the roof.
