DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Located at 16 Altamont Terrace, the house stands on the northeast corner of the intersection of Union Street in Cumberland, Allegany County. The property, which measures approximately 60 feet by 100 feet with the house setting on the southern end, is situated on the westerly slope of a hill that rises sharply to the east.

The house is a two and a half story, brick building with a cut stone foundation; a brick cornice around the entire structure; a one-story one-bay portico on the facade; and a low-pitch gable roof. The roof line runs north/south and the gable end walls extend above the roof line running parallel to the slopes of the roof. Originally, the end walls extended up higher and were squarish in form and contained the chimneys. There is one chimney on the north side and none on the south. The structure is rectangular in shape with two small extensions and a porch and a balcony of recent vintage on the east side. Brick projections at the four corners of the original building form capitals, however, there is no evidence that there ever were pilasters below them. The exterior surface is covered with several coats of paint obscuring the bond of the brick. It appears that the principal facade is of all stretcher bond and the north and south sides of common bond.

The principal facade (west side) has five bays with a center entrance way on the first floor and a pair of small windows above. A photograph published in Art Work of Allegany County (1897) shows the second floor facade as consisting of five matching windows. The portico consists of a flat roof supported by two pairs of free standing columns of the Ionic order (fluted shafts with volutes at the capitals) with plain bases and two flat pilasters against the facade. The doorway has rectangular side lights and transom and double wooden doors. The doors, late Victorian in style, have one large light each in the upper halves and panels in the lower halves. Two iron balconies with decorative balustrades tie into pairs the first floor windows on either side of the portico.

The windows of the original portion are double-hung wooden sashes. The first floor facade windows are floor length with six over nine lights. The windows on the south side, the attic window on the north side, and the four large windows on the second floor of the facade have six over six lights. The two small windows centered on the second floor facade have two over two lights. The windows on the facade have decorated wood lintels while those on the south side and the attic window on the north side have plain wooden lintels. The lintels on the facade

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Sixteen Altamont Terrace in Cumberland, Maryland, is significant for its architecture and for its historical association with the development of health care facilities in Allegany County. The design of the house, erected in the mid nineteenth century, is an example of a folk form of the Greek Revival style. It consists of Greek decorative elements applied to the traditional center hall house. The architectural historian William H. Pierson, Jr. describes this combination as the most common form of the "folk manifestations" of the Greek Revival style.¹ The building has a five bay symmetrical facade with a free-standing Ionic order columnar portico and decorative iron balconies. The house is also representative of the domestic architecture of a wealthy mid nineteenth century citizen of Cumberland.

It is said that the house was constructed for John Oliphant, a businessman who purchased the property in 1851² and is listed for the building on the 1853 Map of Cumberland. The property is located in Dilley's Addition, which was laid out about the mid 1840's. In several of the past deeds, Altamont Terrace is referred to as Ellen Street.

In 1889 Charles James Orrick and his wife purchased the house.³ It was during their ownership that the house was used as the first facilities of the present Memorial Hospital, known then as the Home and Infirmary of Western Maryland.⁴ Orrick was one of the original incorporators of the hospital and his wife served as the first president of the organization.

have molding along the tops and extending downward about two inches on each side. The window frames are narrow with beaded edges. The first and second floor windows in the north side have four over four lights and flat brick arches. There are signs of alterations to the window openings; however, the several coats of paint on the surface make it difficult to see the evidence.

The interior of the house was greatly altered in the first half of the twentieth century when it was converted for apartments. The alterations involved mainly rearranging the rooms making two apartments on each of the main floors and one in the attic. The structure, however, retains the center hall with the staircase and much of the original woodwork. The window and door trim of the first floor center hall and first floor southwest room is trabeated with pilasters and pediment-like lintels. The original doors have six panels: two small ones at the top and at the bottom and two large panels in between. (See sketch) The pilasters on the door ways are about seven inches wide. The panels on the doors and the sidelights have flat applied molding. The floor boards in the hall are narrow, about an inch wide. The vestibule inside the front door has a late-Victorian covering on the wall forming wainscoting. The balustrade on the staircase may be original, however, the newel post was either altered or replaced.

8. SIGNIFICANCE, continued

The house was used as a hospital for only a short time, apparently less than two years, until the facilities were moved to Bedford Street and later to Baltimore Avenue. The hospital was later known as the Western Maryland Hospital until about 1929 when the facilities were moved again and the name changed to Memorial Hospital. For several years this was the only hospital in Allegany County.

Sixteen Altamont Terrace was converted into apartments about 1905 and remains as such today. The present owner acquired the property in 1952.

By J. WILLIAM HUNT 4-7-1946

Not many people are aware that the predecessor of Memorial Hospital was founded as "a home for sick, aged, infirm and friendless people" to quote the certificate of incorporation of the "Home and Infirmary of Western Maryland" as recorded in the Allegany county circuit court March 10, 1838.

Nor is it widely known that the hospital owes its existence solely to women. The first officers were Mrs. J. C. Orrick, president; Mrs. John W. Avritt (afterwards Mrs. James Walter Thomas), vice president; Mrs. Beverly S. Randolph, secretary; and Mrs. Will H. Shepherd, treasurer.

Of those who worked so earnestly to establish a hospital here, Mrs. Orrick was outstanding. It was in her home on Allmont terrace and Union street (later the Drawbaugh Apartments) that the first patients were cared for until the Koris home on Bedford street was purchased for reconversion to hospital purposes. One nurse was the complete staff in that first year 58 years ago.

It was after the group of charitable and determined women inaugurated the work that the Western Maryland Home and Infirmary was incorporated in 1838. The incorporators were Lloyd Lowndes, Robert Burrier, J. C. Orrick, W. E. Weber, Dr. M. A. R. P. Carr and C. B. Orr. Mrs. Carr, Mrs. S. T. Little, Mrs. R. D. Johnson, Mrs. Jacob Humbird, Mrs. J. P. Raffensburger and Mrs. E. P. Glasse.

After two years of operation on Bedford street, the hospital was faced with the necessity of enlarging its quarters there or having a building erected on a new and more spacious site. The latter course was decided on and land was purchased on Baltimore avenue.

It was hard work in those days with only ice cream socials and entertainments for the women to raise money. By persistent effort, however, and aided by some substantial donations, several thousands dollars was finally collected.

William M. McKaig, then in the Maryland state senate, secured a state appropriation of $5,000 for the hospital, its first large financial gift. Four years later his successor, George A. Pearre, got an appropriation of $10,000, and it was felt that construction of the new building on Baltimore avenue might be started. The contract was awarded to Landwehr and Olick, and in November 1892 the Western Maryland Hospital (now the Allegany Inn) was opened with elaborate ceremonies.

Indicative of the non-denominational character of the hospital, rooms were furnished by the Catholic Benevolent Legion, Emmanuel Episcopal parish and the Epworth League of the Methodist churches; a ward was furnished by First Presbyterian church, and other furnishings and equipment were donated by the Hebrew Ladies Aid and the German Lutheran church. Many individuals also donated money and furnishings.

Only the central portion of the hospital was built in 1892. The so-called northeast wing was added in 1900. A spurge of building in 1910 added the southwest wing, the Hinkle Memorial sun parlor, and the nurses home. Mrs. Louisa Hinkle willed $1,000 to the hospital for the sun parlor.

The first period in Memorial Hospital history may be said to have ended in 1912 when Gov. Phillips Lee Goldsborough appointed an entire new board of directors for the Western Maryland. In the 20 years from 1892 to 1912 there were two presidents of the board of directors—Mrs. Orrick and then James Walter Thomas. It is a coincidence that there were also two presidents during the second period which extends from 1912 to 1929 (17 years) when the Western Maryland formally became Memorial Hospital. The two presidents in that period were John W. Young and Hope Carleton. In the 17 years since 1929 there have been two more presidents—Thomas B. Finan and Tasker G. Lowndes, the incumbent.

It was on June 10, 1912 that Gov. Goldsborough named an entire new board of seven—John W. Young, John Keating, Hope Carleton, William W. Brown, W. Woodin Hanly, Henry Bachman and Frederick Fusted. Mr. Young was elected president of the board. Thomas Pooter succeeded Fusted and Lowndes followed Pooter. Daniel Annan succeeded Young and upon his death was succeeded by John Schwarzenbach.

Among the early physicians and surgeons connected with the hospital were Drs. George A. Carder, James T. Johnson, J. A. Twigg, B. Curtis Miller, M. A. R. Carr and William H. Noble.

It is interesting, as a sidelight on Western Maryland-Memorial Hospital history, that "aged and indigent" patients were taken for many years, the last of such "residents" dying in the early nineteen twenties. No such patients have been accepted in the last quarter century.

The palm for longest service as officers goes to Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Randolph, both of whom held official positions from 1895 to 1912. Mrs. Thomas continued her active interest until her death, and accumulated data as a basis for a history of the 85 year old institution.

Twenty years ago it was seen that the Western Maryland Hospital was inadequate for the growing demands of the Cumberland area. In April 1927 the Maryland General Assembly passed a bill for a $500,000 hospital bond issue. In the bill was named a board to take charge of the new hospital when completed.

This board was to comprise the president of the board of Allegany County Commissioners; the Mayor of Cumberland, (each for the length of incumbency in his office); Thomas B. Finan, Tasker G. Lowndes, Morris Rosenbaum, George G. Young and Arthur J. Weber. Unless removed by death members are to retain their posts until 65 years of age, and the board fills all vacancies.

The cornerstone of Memorial Hospital, facing Memorial avenue on Johnson Heights, was laid on May 30, 1928. The name was changed from its predecessor's Western Maryland so that it would be a memorial to those who died in World War I. The hospital was dedicated on August 18, 1929.

Meeting on July 23, 1928 the old board of directors voted to turn all assets of the Western Maryland Hospital over to the new and greater Memorial Hospital, and authorized suspension of all operations as of August 31, 1929.

Two days ago the county commissioners finally disposed of the old Western Maryland property on Baltimore avenue. 34 years after its dedication as a hospital and 17 years after it ceased operations as such, remodeled and renovated, the property has been known as the Allegany Inn for over a decade, but the final transfer out of the county's hands came only last Friday.

It is a vast change from Mrs. Orrick's home to the magnificent modern hospital on Johnson Heights but there can be little improvement in the charitable zeal and the desire to help their fellow-men that animated the group of women who took the first steps in establishing what is today one of the Cumberland area's most notable assets.

A characteristic incident involving the late W. Milnor Roberts occurred last Fourth of July.

After the demonstration of Naval air might at the local airport by a picked group of 14 flyers, the Navy men were dinner guests of the Times-News at Cumberland Country Club. There they met Mr. Roberts with members of his family. Proud of his family's contribution of more than 30 members to the armed forces, he took every opportunity to show his regard and respect for the nation's fighting men and women. The Naval aviators liked him and his keen sense of humor instinctively and then came the climax! Before the men went in to dinner, Mr. Roberts set up champagne for the entire group!

As always, Mil Roberts was an example of modesty and self-effacement in this generous gesture to visiting service men. A successful business man, with a family background of Pan-American achievement, he knew better than most successful business executives how to live culturally and completely. His interests embraced music and sports. He not only appreciated and enjoyed the performance of great artists, but he was a performing musician of no mean ability himself. He even constructed violins that were admired for fine workmanship. He was ever helpful to those who sought his assistance. In fact, Milnor Roberts must have had compensating satisfaction in the last years of his well-rounded and versatile life in contemplation of the days he had lived. His death last week at the age of 82 removes another of those fine characters who contributed so much to fine living in the Cumberland of an earlier day.

Those who missed Hallett Abend's lecture-summation of Pacific problems at the opening session of the Junior Association of Commerce Community Forum on March 26 need not waste time regretting their absence from one of the most stimulating programs of recent years.

The sensible procedure is to purchase tickets tomorrow for the three remaining lectures at Allegany High School auditorium—for the best is yet to come!

Tomorrow night Cumberland will have the opportunity of hearing Vincent Sheehan, rated as one of the most gifted public speakers and keenest analysts of modern times. What he says in his "Personal Opinion" talk and under the stimulation of forum questioning is expected to set a new high standard for such affairs.

Then on April 30 comes Marion Hargrove, whose opinions are sought by Congress and who is already booked for over a year's speeches. It is only by the rarest good fortune that the author of "See Here, Private Hargrove" was secured for a Cumberland appearance.

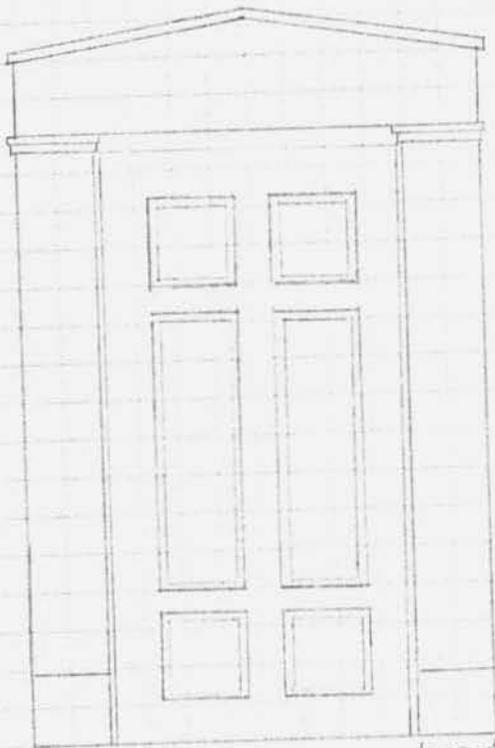

Finally, on almost the date selected for the first atomic bomb test, Gerald Wendt, noted expert, will lecture here (May 7) on "The Atomic Age Opens."

A season ticket to these three forum attractions (all of which are booked within the next month) is an investment we feel can be guaranteed in advance. Tickets will be available at the auditorium tomorrow after 7 p. m.
