

Capsule Summary of 165 Duke of Gloucester Street (AA-1337)

Built in the period 1905-1908, the house at 165 Duke of Gloucester Street was part of a large tract of land that was associated with the 18th century property at 139 Market Street. In 1820, this part of the large tract of land was subdivided and several buildings were erected on the individual lots during the 19th century. At that time, the lot on which the present house at 165 Duke of Gloucester Street sits, was occupied by a frame dwelling. This dwelling was demolished between 1897 and 1903 and the present house built on the lot between 1905 and 1908. The present house is currently owned by the First Presbyterian Church at 175 Duke of Gloucester Street.

Built as a single-family residence, the side-passage frame house is designed in a colonial craftsman manner. Facing east on Duke of Gloucester Street, the house stands two-and-one-half-stories in height. It is set upon a raised, brick foundation, and its walls, originally sheathed with weatherboards, are now covered with asbestos shingles. The gable roof, covered with asphalt shingles, features two, single dormers and a projecting brick chimney. A single-story porch extends across the front of the house, while a two-story rear ell projects off the original back wall.

The house provides information into the physical and social development of this area of Annapolis and is an important contributor to the Annapolis Historic District.

Located on the western side of the street, the building at 165 Duke of Gloucester Street is one of several one-time residential buildings that are sandwiched between the First Presbyterian Church at the corner of Duke of Gloucester and Conduit Streets and the former Independent Fire Company No. 2 firehouse at the corner of Duke of Gloucester and Market Streets. Constructed between 1905 and 1908, the present house on the property replaced an early 19th century dwelling that stood from at least 1820 until the period 1897-1903.

Built as a single-family residence, the house is a freestanding structure that is separated from its neighbor to the north at 167 Duke of Gloucester by a six-foot passageway, and from the Maynard-Burgess house on the south by a narrow, three-foot passageway. The side-passage frame house faces east on Duke of Gloucester Street and stands two-and-one-half-stories in height. It is set upon a raised, brick foundation, and its walls, originally sheathed with weatherboards, are now covered with asbestos shingles. The gable roof, covered with asphalt shingles, features two, single dormers and a projecting brick chimney. A single-story porch extends across the front of the house, while a two-story rear ell projects off the original back wall. The house is designed in a colonial craftsman manner in the sense that it offers the massing and symmetry characteristic of Colonial Revival architecture, but has architectural details, such as the multi-paned windows that are associated with the craftsman movement.

The front (east) elevation of the house is three bays wide. The first floor consists of a single door with 4-paned sidelights and a large 2/2 window with flanking 2/2 side lights. Both the door and the central window are surmounted by diamond paned transoms. The second floor is composed of three, single 2/2 windows, while two pedimented dormers with 2/2 windows project from the gable roof above. Four, large wood brackets support the cornice and create a visual separation between the second story and attic level. The hipped roof porch, which extends across the first floor of the front of the house, is set upon a raised brick foundation and is supported by wrought iron replacement columns. The hipped roof is covered with standing seam metal.

The south elevation faces the narrow path which separates this house from the Maynard-Burgess House next door. The undecorated wall surface is broken, on the first and second floors, by two 2/2 windows towards the rear of the house and a casement window towards the front. No openings are located in the attic level of this end gable.

The north elevation has more fenestration. Four 2/2 windows are evenly spaced across this side elevation on both the first and second floors, while two, 2/2 windows are found in the attic level. All of these windows have flat architrave surrounds with a slight projecting cornice.

The rear (west) elevation of the house is today defined by a two-story shed roof wing that abuts the original rear wall of the house. Visible above this wing, is a centrally projecting gable off of the original house block. A single entrance door is located within a recessed porch located at the northeast corner. A single window is located next to the door on this level, while two 2/2 windows pierce the second floor above. Each of these windows is surrounded by the same flat architrave with a slight projecting cornice that is found on the north elevation windows. Although these windows are located in a rear extension, the windows themselves may have been salvaged from the original back wall.

The house extends approximately 2/3 the depth of the 81-foot lot, leaving a small yard at the rear. This yard is partially laid in brick, is surrounded on the sides by planting beds and is separated from the Maynard Burgess house property by a chain-link fence.

The interior of the house consists of a relatively unaltered side-passage, double-pile plan house. The entry door opens directly onto the hall that features a straight-flight stair located against the south side wall and openings into the front and rear parlors on the north side of the house. The straight-flight stair is articulated by two turned balusters per tread and a wood rail with torus molding typical of the period. Ghosting along the side walls indicates that stringer brackets may have existed and have since been removed. New, 2-1/2-inch-wide floor boards run the width of the house across the hall, front and rear parlor rooms of this first floor.

The front parlor, or living room, opens off the hall directly across from the stairs. The door into this room from the hall is a hollow wood replacement door surrounded by original bulls eye molding. The principal design features in this room are the large window with side lights and diamond-paned transom on center of the front wall and surrounded by bulls eye molding, and a 20th century mantel against the back wall having recalling Greek Revival design. Attenuated columns support the undecorated frieze and mantel shelf, and rusticated plaster ornaments the fireplace face. Recently added, built-in book shelves flank the central fireplace. The windows on the side wall are similarly surrounded by bulls eye molding.

The rear parlor, or dining room, is located behind the front room and opens off of the hall through a large, double opening that has been enlarged from its original size. This room has been further altered by the addition of closets against the east wall where the fireplace would have opened. Only the windows and their bulls eye molding survive from the original room.

The hall continues back past the rear parlor to the kitchen wing at the rear. The kitchen, which has been extended slightly by the addition of the rear ell, is equipped with all new cabinetry and appliances.

The second floor of the house is laid out into a series of three rooms and a bathroom. Here, original 3-1/2-inch wide floor boards are found to run the length of the house, as opposed to the width of the house as on the first floor. The bathroom is located at the end of the hall, at the top of the stairs and features the original black and white tile. The bedrooms appear to be laid out in their original configuration and still have their original bulls eye moldings around the doors and windows.

The third floor or attic level is reached by another straight flight stair identical to the one ascending from the first floor. The stair leads up to a narrow hall which terminates at the end in one of the two dormer windows and opens onto two rooms. The front rooms are lit by the second of the two dormer windows as well as one of the two north gable end windows. The back room is lit only by the second of the gable end windows. All of the doors and windows at this level are surrounded by the bulls eye molding found on the first and second floors. Like the second floor, the attic level still has its original 3-1/2-inch floor boards.

The basement is reached from the first floor by stairs located under the hall staircase. It is a full basement which reveals the original brick floors, brick walls and brick piers.

Built in the period 1905-1908, the house at 165 Duke of Gloucester Street was part of a large tract of land that was associated with the 18th century property at 139 Market Street. In 1820, this part of the large tract of land was subdivided and several buildings were erected on the individual lots during the 19th century. At that time, the lot on which the present house at 165 Duke of Gloucester Street sits, was occupied by a frame dwelling. This dwelling was demolished between 1897 and 1903 and the present house built on the lot between 1905 and 1908. Because the older house was located towards the rear of the current lot, archaeological investigation of the site could potentially yield evidence of past occupation of the site. The present house is currently owned by the First Presbyterian Church at 175 Duke of Gloucester Street and is occupied by Reverend Elizabeth Hewitt.

The land upon which the house sits was originally part of Lot 33 on the Stoddert Map of 1718 and owned at that time by Charles Carroll. In 1762, Lot 33, along with adjacent Lot 34 and 1/2 Lot 35 came into the possession of John Hall who held the land as one large tract of land. Hall was a prominent attorney from a noted Anne Arundel County family, who lived at the 18th century house located at 139 Market Street.

Following John Hall's death, the property remained in the Hall family until 1809 when it was sold to James H. Weems. Within a year, Weems sold the property, in its entirety, to Maynadier, who later sold the land to insolvent debtor, George Medkiff.<sup>1</sup> In 1820, the judge presiding over the Medkiff case appointed Nicholas Brewer, Jr. trustee, to sell the real and personal property of Medkiff for the benefit of his creditors.<sup>2</sup>

At that time, Medkiff's property was divided, breaking apart the large tract of land consisting of Stoddert Lots 33, 34 and 1/2 35 that had been consolidated by John Hall in 1809. A plat prepared by John Duvall, surveyor, July 1820 shows that part of Lot 33 was divided into a series of 10 lots along Duke of Gloucester Street, eight with 25-foot frontages and two with 31.5-foot frontages. The property at 165 Duke of Gloucester Street sits on the parcel of land designated Lot 8 which has a 25-foot frontage on Duke of Gloucester Street and extends back 81 feet. All ten of these lots were advertised for sale in the Maryland Gazette on June 1, 1820 and were sold by Brewer between 1820 and 1838.<sup>3</sup>

Lot 8 was sold by Brewer "with a small house on it" to John Tydings in June 1820 for $350.00.<sup>4</sup> Following Tydings' death in 1833, the property was sold at public auction to Somerville Pinkney. The house and lot changed hands twice before being purchased, in 1843, by James Iglehart, who also owned the Maynard-Burgess property next door. Iglehart, a merchant and entrepreneur, owned significant property in Annapolis and eventually became one of the city's wealthiest men.<sup>5</sup> Iglehart purchased Lot 8 with "buildings and improvements."<sup>6</sup> Three years later, in 1846, Iglehart sold the property to Thomas Bryan for $450.00. The census records for Annapolis indicate that the R.T. Bryan family lived at the house at 163 Duke of Gloucester Street in 1850.

Thomas Bryan retained ownership of the property until 1888, when they sold it to Samuel R. Frazier for $600.00.<sup>7</sup> Frazier's ownership of a lot and building is confirmed by the assessment records for Annapolis, which assess Frazier, in 1889, for a lot, 25 feet by 81 feet on Duke of Gloucester and one frame house. The property was valued at $675.00. Frazier held onto the property from 1888 until 1904 when he sold it to John R. Sullivan. Before selling it, however, Frazier demolished the dwelling on the site sometime between 1897 and 1903. The Sanborn Maps from 1885, 1891 and 1897 show this frame dwelling as being 1-1/2-stories in height and being set back approximately 40 feet from Duke of Gloucester Street. The 1903 Sanborn Map shows the property as a vacant lot.

Between 1905 and 1908, Sullivan built the present dwelling on the site.<sup>8</sup> Sullivan, listed as a Superintendent of Public Buildings, lived at the house in 1910 with his wife, son and three boarders. In 1920, Sullivan was listed as a Justice of the Peace who lived in the house with his sister-in-law.<sup>9</sup>

John Sullivan's will in 1920 left the property to his son William, who is "subject and charged with a home and support of my sister-in-law, Rebecca Wilson as long as she lives or remains unmarried to make her home."<sup>10</sup>

In 1930, William Sullivan and Rebecca Wilson sold the property to the Columbus Club of Annapolis. The property changed hands again before it was sold, in 1955 to the trustees of the First Presbyterian Church in the City of Annapolis. The property is currently owned by the church and is the home of Reverend, Elizabeth Hewitt.

<sup>8</sup> Assessment Records indicate John R. Sullivan as owning a lot 81 feet by 25 feet on Duke of Gloucester Street with no house on the lot. The 1908 Sanborn Map indicates that the present house was built by that time.

ADDITIONAL ARCHITECTURAL OR STRUCTURAL DESCRIPTION:

Heavy pedimented dormers, bracketed cornice, molded window and transom lit door caps; triple window at first floor, columns removed at hipped roof porch, replaced with wrought iron, stoop rebuilt, asbestos shingles.

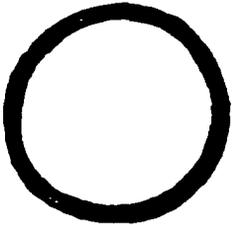

RELATED STRUCTURES: (Describe)

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE:

Altered Vernacular Annapolis Federal with Neo-Classic aspirations as expressed in dormers and triple window. Contributes to streetscape despite poor alterations at porch.
