Early 18th century

Construction details of this house indicate that it was built prior to 1743. This dwelling was later enlarged, most noticeably by increasing it from 1 1/2 stories to 2 1/2 stories. The two sections are easily distinguishable due to the different brick-bond patterns. The older section is English bond and the later, second story is common bond, with five courses of stretchers to each header row. Also, the earlier section has irregularly placed segmental arch 9/9 sash windows while the later second story is lighted by symmetrically placed 6/6 sash windows with jack arches. The front (south) façade of the house contains a door in the approximate center, with two windows to the left and one to the right. The second floor holds four windows across this façade. The west gable end is two wide bays wide, with narrow windows near the edges of the building on the first and second floors, and two windows in the attic gable. Large flush brick chimneys rise from either gable end of the roof. In a c. 1920 photograph, a hip-roofed Victorian porch with square posts and sawnwork brackets was extant, and many of the windows retained shutters. A 1960 photograph of part of the front shows that this porch had been removed and the entrance was sheltered by a cantilevered hood. The square first-floor plan is divided into four rooms, the southwest one having a boxed staircase rising from the outer corner. There is a wooden lock of large size on the front door, and many pieces of early hardware remain throughout the house. In a plan of this type, the rooms were customarily heated by corner fireplaces. One such fireplace remains at Obligation, in the back parlor. In addition to the brick dwelling, the Federal Direct Tax of 1798 lists several outbuildings which stood on the property in close proximity to the house. They included a frame dwelling which was described as "out of repair," indicating that it may have predated the brick dwelling. Two frame kitchens, one of which was "out of repair," an overseer's house, and a henhouse were assessed, as well as a medical shop for Dr. Thomas Noble Stockett.

Obligation is significant primarily for its architecture, but also for its association with the locally prominent Stockett family. The house was built for Thomas Stockett III in 1743, and was enlarged to its present configuration in 1827 during the ownership of his grandson, Joseph Noble Stockett (1779-1858). Dr. Thomas Noble Stockett (1747-1802) was the son of Thomas III, and became a prominent citizen and served as surgeon for the Maryland Line during the American Revolution.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

In 1658 three brother, Thomas, Henry and Dr. Francis Stockett, emigrated to Maryland and established themselves on a tract of the west side of the Susquehanna River. The site became the present town of Havre de Grace, Maryland. These Stockett brothers removed to southern Anne Arundel County where, in 1668-69, each gained a patent for 664 acres of contiguous lands bounded by a stream called Stocketts' Run.

Thomas, appointed High Sheriff of the county in 1668, was styled "Captain." He died in 1671; willed Obligation to a son, Thomas (1667-1732), who was active in county political affairs and was called upon to survey and settle cases involving land disputes. He expanded Obligation to 2,000 acres. Thomas Stockett III went to England, was robbed of all his possessions, and was befriended by a merchant who taught him about business. Thomas returned to Maryland and established a prosperous neighborhood store. His son, Dr. Thomas Noble Stockett (1747-1802) was well educated, scholarly; he joined the "Sons of Freedom" movement, was commissioned Surgeon with the Maryland Line and served at Valley Forge where hardships impaired his health. Returning to Obligation to recruit soldiers locally, he later resumed his medical practice and raised blooded horses.

His son, Joseph Noble Stockett (1779-1858), inherited Obligation, studied medicine but did not practice, raised horses and hunted foxes. He was a member of the South River Club. A staunch Federalist, he later became a Whig of the Henry Clay persuasion. Joseph Noble Stockett was married four times and had eight children.
