DESCRIPTION SUMMARY:

Abbington Farm, historically known as "Abington," is located on the south side of Severn Chapel Road near Millersville in Anne Arundel County, Maryland. The main dwelling is a frame, side passage, double-pile house with additions on both gable ends. It is a result of four periods of construction, spanning the 19th and early 20th centuries. To the rear, south of the main dwelling, are situated several outbuildings including a frame summer kitchen, a stone and frame icehouse, a frame, brick and stone springhouse/dairy, a frame privy, chicken house, tool shed and corncrib, a large frame stable, and a frame tenant house. All of these buildings contribute to the significance of the resource.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The principal dwelling is situated facing north, on a hill overlooking Severn Chapel Road. The 2½ story side passage, double pile plan main block is centrally placed with two 1½ story wings of similar proportions extending from both the east and west gable ends. The main block dates from c. 1840, while two bays of the west wing which abut the main block are said to be an earlier dwelling. Three additional bays were added to the west end of this section sometime in the late 19th century. The east wing was added in 1974 to balance and complement the west wing.

The house rests on a stone foundation and is covered predominately with weatherboard siding. German siding covers the first story facade under the porch and the facade of the west wing. The roof of each section is covered with asphalt shingles. Pairs of pitched roof dormers protrude from the roof of each section, both on the facade and the rear (south) elevation. A one-story hip-roof porch runs almost completely across the facade of the dwelling. It is supported by simple tapered square posts. A triangular pediment breaks the porch roofline marking the entrance to the main block.

Two interior gable end chimneys are located at the east end of the main block. The earlier portion of the west wing is marked by an interior chimney which has been raised to give it more height. Another interior gable end chimney marks the west end of the west wing.

The rear of the entire house has been altered with the addition of enclosed shed additions on each section.

The windows are predominately 6/6 sash with aluminum storm windows. Large 32-pane, floor to ceiling casement windows have been added on the facade in the first story of the main block and in two bays of both the west and east wings.

The principal entrance is located at the west end of the main block. A wide 6-panel wooden door opens into the side passage which contains the stair. It is located at the rear of the passage and rises to the second story against the west wall. A single room (originally partitioned into two) opens off the side passage on the first floor. The two mantels in this room date from the mid-19th century.

The interior in both sections of the west wing has been modernized to accommodate a dining area and kitchen.

A number of outbuildings associated with this site are of special note. A board and batten summer kitchen stands just south of the west wing and is connected to it by an open passageway. The entrance into the summer kitchen is at the north gable end. An interior chimney with a clay stovepipe emerges from the south gable end. The interior is presently used for storage. The loft space is whitewashed. Extending from the south gable end of the summer kitchen is a later and smaller wing which functions as the pumphouse.

Directly west and across the driveway from the house is a masonry and board and batten icehouse. Access is gained through an enclosed portico extending from the east gable end. Steps lead down into a large space which is partitioned by a curved masonry wall. The high ceiling consists of a series of brick vaults supported with iron metal joists. The smaller space has a poured concrete floor with a trough. The frame loft space above this area is accessed from the rear, west elevation. The rafters are mitred together. A small ventilator pierces the gable roof.

South of the summer kitchen is a low stone, brick and frame springhouse/dairy. It is constructed in two separate sections with an open passageway in between, all covered by the same gable roof. The western section is a brick-walled collecting pool for the spring which emerges from the ground in this area. A heavy hand-hewn frame which rests on the brick foundation walls of the pool is enclosed with wooden lattice and weatherboard siding. The water in the pool is channelled through a pipe which runs under the passageway and into the stone constructed dairy section. It is directed into a trough which runs around the inside of the walls and is dispersed into the stream emerging from the east end of the building. Evidence of wrought nails in the plate of this building may indicate that it is, with some renovations, a late 18th or early 19th century outbuilding.

The frame privy stands south of the icehouse. It is covered with German siding and has a pyramidal roof. There is a double entrance on the east elevation.

A large and elaborate frame stable stands southwest of the house. It was constructed in 1902, which is clearly marked on a decorative jig-sawn arched ventilator located on the facade, east, gable end. The interior of the stable is intact, and consists of narrow beaded board paneling throughout, with red oak standing stalls for horses, marked by large square wooden posts with pedimented finials. A recent, large enclosed concrete block shed addition extends from the north elevation of the stable. Inside this addition, the present owners have incorporated an early boundary stone into the foundation. It reads: "S. Boundary/ of Brandy/ 1790." Brandy, owned by the Warfields, was a tract which bordered Abington on the northwest. The loft space above the stable was finished and served as living quarters for the coachman.

HISTORY AND SUPPORT

The tract known as "Abington," on which Abbington Farm is situated, was patented to John Gather and Robert Proctor in 1664. At Gather's death in 1705, his son John Jr. inherited the Abington plantation.¹

One of John Jr.'s sons, Rezin Gaither, lived at Abington and married his housekeeper, Sarah Yieldhall, late in life.² He is assessed in the 1798 Federal Direct Tax with 150 acres of land, improved by one 40 X 20 foot dwelling and one cornhouse measuring 12 X 20 feet. (Neither of these structures survives, unless a portion of the dwelling was incorporated into the west wing of the present dwelling.)

In 1807, Gaither died intestate and heavily in debt to Mary Weems for 343 pounds, 6 shillings, and 6 pence. A long court proceeding followed, involving John Gaither, the son of Rezin, vs. Mary Weems. It resulted in 1815 with the purchase of the Abington Plantation, at a discount, by Anne Weems, the daughter of Mary Weems. The legal land transaction took place the following year in 1816, by which time Anne Weems had married Horatio Ridout of "White Hall."³

In 1837, Rignal D. Woodward purchased the property for $779.40 from Anne, John and Dr. John Ridout, the widow, son and nephew, respectively, of Horatio Ridout who died in 1834.⁴

The two-story, side passage, double pile plan main block was probably built by Rignal D. Woodward shortly after he purchased the property. Woodward was a planter, served as sheriff, and presiding Justice of the Orphans Court. In 1888, he died and the 198 acre Abington Farm was sold to pay debts. It was purchased by his son, Rignal T. Woodward, who was a partner in Woodward, Baldwin and Company, the prosperous Baltimore textile commission house. The progenitor of this company was the William Woodward Company, founded by William Woodward, brother of Rignal D. Woodward.⁵

At Rignal T.'s death in 1905, the property passed to his children, Elijah, Christopher H.R., and Mary of New York City, and Charles of Anne Arundel County. They mortgaged the property in 1913 and defaulted in 1928, at which time it was sold and purchased by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Baltimore.⁶ In 1931, it was sold to John Tevis Harwood of Baltimore, who sold it in 1935 to Benjamin and Bertha McCloskey. In 1944 Bertha McCloskey sold it to Henry C. Wigley, Sr. and Henry C. Wigley, Jr. In 1946, Henry Sr. sold it to Henry Jr., and in 1979 Mr. and Mrs. Wigley Jr. sold a portion of "Abington" to the present owners, William and Barbara Caillouette.

Boundary Justification

The nominated property, approximately 26.5 acres, comprises the resource within its immediate setting. The north boundary is defined by Severn Chapel Road, beyond which lies open space which does not contribute to the significance of the resource. The west and southwest boundaries are lines of convenience, beyond which lies a 20th century residence. The south boundary is defined by the 150-foot contour line - beyond which lies open space which does not contribute to the significance of the resource. The southeast and east boundaries are lines of convenience (the east is defined by the legal boundary) - beyond which lies open space and a 20th century dwelling which do not contribute to the significance of the resource.

Summary Description

Abbington Farm, historically known as "Abington," is located on the south side of Severn Chapel Road in the Millersville vicinity of Anne Arundel County. The main dwelling is a frame, side passage, double-pile house with additions on both gable ends. It is a result of four periods of construction, spanning the 19th and early 20th centuries. To the rear, south of the main dwelling, are situated several outbuildings including a frame summer kitchen, a stone and frame icehouse, a frame, brick and stone springhouse/dairy, a frame privy, chicken house, tool shed and corncrib, a large frame stable, and a frame tenant house. All of these buildings contribute to the significance of the site.

General Description

The principal dwelling is situated facing north, on a hill overlooking Severn Chapel Road. The 2 1/2 story side passage, double pile plan main block is centrally placed with two 1 1/2 story wings of similar proportions extending from both the east and west gable ends. The main block dates from c. 1840, while two bays of the west wing which abut the main block are said to be an earlier dwelling. Three additional bays were added to the west end of this section sometime in the late 19th century. The east wing was added in 1974 to balance and complement the west wing.

The house rests on a stone foundation and is covered predominately with weatherboard siding. German siding covers the first story facade under the porch and the facade of the west wing. The roof of each section is covered with asphalt shingles. Pairs of pitched roof dormers protrude from the roof of each section, both on the facade and the rear (south) elevation. A one-story hip-roof porch runs almost completely across the facade of the dwelling. It is supported by simple tapered square posts. A triangular pediment breaks the porch roofline marking the entrance to the main block.

Two interior gable end chimneys are located at the east end of the main block. The earlier portion of the west wing is marked by an interior chimney which has been raised to give it more height. Another interior gable end chimney marks the west end of the west wing.

The rear of the entire house has been altered with the addition of enclosed shed additions on each section.

The windows are predominately 6/6 sash with aluminum storm windows. Large 32-pane, floor to ceiling casement windows have been added on the facade in the first story of the main block and in two bays of both the west and east wings.

The principal entrance is located at the west end of the main block. A wide 6-panel wooden door opens into the side passage which contains the stair. It is located at the rear of the passage and rises to the second story against the west wall. A single room (originally partitioned into two) opens off the side passage on the first floor. The two mantels in this room date from the mid-19th century.

The interior in both sections of the west wing has been modernized to accommodate a dining area and kitchen.

A number of outbuildings associated with this site are of special note. A board and batten summer kitchen stands just south of the west wing and is connected to it by an open passageway. The entrance into the summer kitchen is at the north gable end. An interior chimney with a clay stovepipe emerges from the south gable end. The interior is presently used for storage. The loft space is whitewashed. Extending from the south gable end of the summer kitchen is a later and smaller wing which functions as the pumphouse.

Directly west and across the driveway from the house is a masonry and board and batten icehouse/cold storage. Access is gained through an enclosed portico extending from the east gable end. Steps lead down into a large space which is partitioned by a curved masonry wall. The high ceiling consists of a series of brick vaults supported with iron metal joists. The smaller space has a poured concrete floor with a trough. The frame loft space above this area is accessed from the rear, west elevation. The rafters are mitred together. A small ventilator pierces the gable roof.

South of the summer kitchen is a low stone, brick and frame springhouse/dairy. It is constructed in two separate sections with an open passageway in between, all covered by the same gable roof. The western section is a brick-walled collecting pool for the spring which emerges from the ground in this area. A heavy hand-hewn frame which rests on the brick foundation walls of the pool is enclosed with wooden latticing and weatherboard siding. The water in the pool is channelled through a pipe which runs under the passageway and into the stone constructed dairy section. It is directed into a trough which runs around the inside of the walls and is dispersed into the stream emerging from the east end of the building. Evidence of wrought nails in the plate of this building may indicate that it is, with some renovations, a late 18th or early 19th century outbuilding.

The frame privy stands south of the icehouse. It is covered with German siding and has a pyramidal roof. There is a double entrance on the east elevation.

A large and elaborate frame stable stands southwest of the house. It was constructed in 1902, which is clearly marked on a decorative jig-sawn arched ventilator located on the facade, east, gable end. The interior of the stable is intact, and consists of narrow beaded board paneling throughout, with red oak standing stalls for horses, marked by large square wooden posts with pedimented finials. A recent, large enclosed concrete block shed addition extends from the north elevation of the stable. Inside this addition, the present owners have incorporated an early boundary stone into the foundation. It reads: "S. Boundary/ of Brandy/ 1790." Brandy, owned by the Warfields, was a tract which bordered Abington on the northwest. The loft space above the stable was finished and served as living quarters for the coachman.

The late 19th century frame tenant house also has recent additions which obscure its original configuration.

The two-story, side passage, double pile plan main block was probably built by Rignal D. Woodward shortly after he purchased the property. Woodward was a planter, served as sheriff, and presiding Justice of the Orphans Court. In 1888, he died and the 198 acre Abington Farm was sold to pay debts. It was purchased by his son, Rignal T. Woodward, who was a partner in Woodward, Baldwin and Company, the prosperous Baltimore textile commission house. The progenitor of this company was the William Woodward Company, founded by William Woodward, brother of Rignal D. Woodward.

At Rignal T.'s death in 1905, the property passed to his children, Elijah, Christopher H. R., and Mary of New York City, and Charles of Anne Arundel County. They mortgaged the property in 1913 and defaulted in 1928, at which time it was sold and purchased by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Baltimore.⁶ In 1931, it was conveyed to John Tevis Harwood of Baltimore, who conveyed it in 1935 to Benjamin and Bertha McCloskey. In 1944 Bertha McCloskey conveyed it to Henry C. Wigley, Sr. and Henry C. Wigley, Jr. In 1946, Henry Sr. conveyed it to Henry Jr., and in 1979 Mr. and Mrs. Wigley Jr. conveyed a portion of "Abington" to the present owners, William and Barbara Caillouette.

#10. Boundary Justification

Abbingdon Farm, which includes approximately 26.5 acres, comprises the resource within its immediate setting. The north boundary is defined by Severn Chapel Road, beyond which lies open space which does not contribute to the significance of the resource. The west and southwest boundaries are lines of convenience, beyond which lies a 20th century residence. The south boundary is defined by the 150-foot contour line--beyond which lies open space which does not contribute to the significance of the resource. The southeast and east boundaries are lines of convenience (the east is defined by the legal boundary)--beyond which lie open space and a 20th century dwelling which do not contribute to the significance of the resource.

Grantor: John Golder of the City of Philadelphia, Trustee

Grantee: Horatio Ridout & Ann (wife) of Anne Arundel County
 By decree of Chancery Court, March 10, 1812.

John Golder appointed trustee & authorized to sell real estate of Rezin Gaither, late of Anne Arundel County, for payment of his debts.

Estate sold Oct. 6, 1812, to Anne Weems, since intermarried with Horatio Ridout

120, plus or minus, acres of Abington with improvements thereon--occupied by John Gaither, Eliza, Rezin, Rebecca, Joshua & Ruth Gaither, heirs of Rezin.

Consideration: $8.00 per acre

Discount allowed by auditors of court to Mary Weems (mother of Ann Ridout) which she assigned to Ann Ridout. (Mary Weems brought Chancery case because Rezin had not paid a lien to her at the time of his death.)

34 acres of this tract sold to Matthias Hammond.

Chancery Record

Liber 86, No. 1 (1812)

Mary Weems vs. Rezin Gaither

Mary Weems petitioned the Court on Aug. 16, 1806, because Rezin Gaither who took out a lien with her on March 27, 1801, for 343 pounds, 6 shillings and 6 pence had not paid any of it or the interest.

Mary Weems received $100 in interest on Oct. 27, 1803.

She filed the complaint in 1806, but before the case could be heard, Rezin died - leaving Rezin, John, Elizabeth, Rebecca, Joshua & Ruth as heirs.

Rebecca, Joshua and Ruth - infants under age of 21.

Bill of Revivor was filed by Mary Weems (Dec. 1808)

$50.00 paid Oct. 23, 1806

Case carried through each year with the Weems renewing the lease each year until 1812.

First sale of 34 acres "severed" from the land on which the dwelling stands. Second sale of 120 acres, plus or minus, - the "improved and reserved moiety of a tract of land called Abington," first purchased by John Gaither for $8.25 per acre. However, Gaither did not comply & refused to comply with the terms of purchase. John Golder, the Trustee, resold the land to Ann Weems, daughter of Mary Weems, for $8.00 per acre.

Ann Weems did not comply with purchase; finally Horatio Ridout paid on Feb. 27, 1816. "Received from Thomas Bowie, Esquire, the sum of money mentioned in the above order." Signed John Golder.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The long frame house at "Abbington" stands on a ridge overlooking the Severn Chapel Road. It has been enlarged and renovated many times but the original, one room, 16' x 20' dwelling remains, virtually intact, as part of the present structure. The house is symmetrical, having a 2 1/2 story, 3-bay center section, and a long 1 1/2 story wing on each end. The house faces north. The oldest part is 2-bays long, being the east half of the 1 1/2 story section on the west end of the center block. This part may have been built in the early 18th century but it is difficult to determine a date because of subsequent renovations. The central block of the house dates from the early 19th century. It has a typical, double-parlor, side-hall, plan with two interior brick chimneys on the east end. The 1 1/2 story wing on the east end of the house, designed by Kenneth Lanier Anderson, was completed last year.

There are several other buildings of interest at "Abbington". Connected to the rear of the west wing by a breezeway is the summer kitchen. It has a steep A-roof, and it is sheathed in board and batten siding. There is an interior chimney on the south end. Just across the drive at the west end of the house is a frame and fieldstone storage vault or cellar. The bottom level is below ground, reached by a set of steps in the small porch on the east side. The walls are solid masonry and there is a high ceiling formed by a series of parallel brick vaults. The space is divided by a free-standing, curved masonry wall. The floor is now covered in concrete but there is still a trough system which was probably used for drainage from ice stored there or from a stream used to cool milk etc. The room is dark, cool and damp. The above ground level of this building is a frame loft. The steep, A-roof has a vent in the center. The end walls, under the overhanging eaves, are covered in board and batten siding. A curious building and unique in this area, it may have been used for the storage of cider or a large quantity of other perishables.

Farther to the south of the main house at the head of a spring is a long, low, shingle-roofed building. It is in two parts under the same A-roof. The western-most part is a brick walled collecting pool for spring water. Above the brick wall, which ends about a foot above ground level, is a heavy, hand hewn wood frame supporting the roof. The frame is covered by a lath trellis. The water overflows from the pool into a pipe which runs under the open passageway in the center of the building and into the dairy. The dairy has stone walls. A trough carries the cooling water around the inside of the walls and out again into the stream.

An elaborate privy stands near the garage. It has a square, hipped roof, topped by a wooden finial. There are two doors on the front leading to separate compartments. Each compartment has a window. The privy was intended to be moved and could be cleaned by raising a hatch in the back.

A large and elaborate stable was built in 1902. The front gable bears some gingerbread details and the date. There are several smaller farm buildings and a tenant house near the stable.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

"Abbington" was first surveyed in 1663 by John Gaither and Robert Proctor. It consisted of 1091 acres. The land remained in the Gaither family until the mid-1700's. It was owned for a time by John Worthington Jr. and then acquired in about 1800 by the Woodwards of "Belair" in Prince Georges County. The Woodwards built the stable and probably made the enlargements to the house. "Abbington" was bought by the present owners in about 1940.
