DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
This small, frame bungalow was built in the 1890's to house the farmer on the Armiger land. The structure is in fairly good condition. It is 1 1/2 stories under a long hipped roof. The front (west) facade has three bays with the entrance in the center. A simple, open porch extends across the front. It is supported on slender, turned posts decorated with scroll-cut brackets. The house rests on a brick foundation. The exterior is sheathed in vertical car-siding up to the level of the window sills. Above that point, regular horizontal, lapped siding is used. The house is two bays deep. There is a 1 story addition on the back at the north end. A simple structure this is nevertheless an older example of the prevalent early 20th century bungalow style. The wainscot effect given to the exterior walls is an unusual feature.
