Sadler's Hardware occupies an example of late Victorian commercial architecture. It is one of those many buildings in Annapolis that has sides not at 90° from the facade. The storefront has been "colonialized" and has a metal hood-roof above it. The 2nd storey has 6 unevenly spaced 1/2/1 windows with splayed brick lintels and brick keystones. The 3rd storey is a shingle mansard roof with 4 very decorative dormers. The shingles are laid up in a fish scale pattern (see Nos. 97, 99 Cathedral St.) The mansard and dormers are hidden by a large sign which should be removed. Both Sadler's and Stevens are same scale and form a nice frame for Nos. 132 and 136.
