

CAPSULE SUMMARY
Gloucester Apartments
142-144 Duke of Gloucester Street
AA-467

The large, three-story, five-bay brick building located at the intersection of Duke of Gloucester and Green streets is known locally by its historic name, the Gloucester Apartments. The former apartment building was constructed between 1823 and 1836 by either William M. Mason of Virginia or Sarah E. and Thomas Sands as a single-family dwelling. Around the turn of this century, the dwelling was used as a boarding house, and by 1913 it was converted into an apartment house with four apartments. Between 1930 and 1949, the building was enlarged and renovated to accommodate nine apartments. The building is presently under renovation and will house offices on the first story.

Despite its change in use over the years, the building survives as an imposing structure, rising three stories in height and stretching five bays wide. Set upon a brick foundation, the building has walls laid in a fine pressed Flemish bond with recessed mortar joints and is covered with a low gable roof with end chimneys. A long two-story ell was built in several different phases and extends three bays deep along the Green Street elevation. A one-bay-wide addition with craftsman detailing was made after 1930 to allow for additional apartments.

The large brick building at 142-144 Duke of Gloucester Street was erected circa 1830 at the prominent corner site of Duke of Gloucester and Green streets as a commodious single-family dwelling that was later converted into apartments. The building survives as an imposing structure, rising three stories in height; it is five bays wide and two bays deep. Set upon a brick foundation, the building has walls laid in a fine pressed Flemish bond with recessed mortar joints and is covered with a low gable roof. A long two-story ell was built in several different phases and extends three bays deep along the Green Street elevation. A one-bay-wide addition with craftsman detailing was made to the southwest elevation after 1930.

EXTERIOR DESCRIPTION: Main Block

Although the overall appearance is one of stature and has aspects of both the Federal and Greek Revival styles, the building lacks a clear and distinct style in which to be categorized. The facade (southwest elevation) fronts directly onto the busy Duke of Gloucester Street. It is divided into five equal bays, with a central entry flanked by windows on the first story and five bays of windows on the second and third stories. The central entry consists of an arched brick opening with no exterior door leading into a recessed entry vestibule and door. The arched opening has molded wood surrounds consisting of wood pilasters supporting wood capitals that serve as impostes for the molded wood trim of the arch. The door, reached by contemporary brick steps, features an elegant fanlight and molded wood surrounds trimmed by a temporary plywood replacement door. The windows flanking this central entry have 6/1 sash with the original large beaded surrounds and wood sills intact.

The second and third story windows have 6/6 sash with ogee-molded muntins. The first and second story windows have gauged jack arches, while those on the third story extend to the edge of the cornice line. The ground level of this elevation has two windows on either side of the central entry, sunk into the ground with brick window wells in front.

The Green Street (southeast) elevation of the main block is two bays deep with two 6/6 windows with jack-arched lintels on all three floors, on either side of the brick chimney, and an English basement entry leading to the ground level. The English basement is reached by concrete steps with a contemporary wrought iron railing forming the edge between the stair well and the sidewalk. The door is contemporary and of incompatible plywood. The end chimney is flush with the wall surface and rises just slightly above the roofline at the ridgeline.

The northwest elevation is abutted by the mid-20th-century brick addition. Only the rear bay of the original, three-bay deep building is exposed. This bay has 6/6 windows on each of the three stories with molded, beaded surrounds and wood sills. A brick chimney is built against the rear edge of this elevation at the intersection of the main block and the rear ell.

The northeast (rear) elevation consists entirely of the rear ell which extends across the entire rear elevation of the main block.

Rear ell

The two-story, three-bay deep, four-bay wide brick ell which extends down Green Street from the rear of the main block of the house is of brick construction and was built in at least three separate phases as evidenced by the visible changes in brickwork. The original ell, built simultaneous to the main block, was two stories tall and three bays deep with walls laid in a stretcher bond. A brick chimney projected above the roofline between the first and second bays. The ell, which is clearly visible on the 1858 Sachse's Bird's Eye View of the City of Annapolis, had a sloped roof with the pitch sloping towards the interior of the block. Presumably, this ell served as the servant/slaves quarters to the main house.

By 1913, when the dwelling was converted into apartments, the rear ell was significantly enlarged. A third story was added to the two-story structure and an additional, three-story bay was added at the building's northeast (rear) elevation, along with a one-story bay section next to it. This one-story bay was eventually raised to three stories, making the rear bay the four-bay, three-story brick structure that it is today. The ell abuts the entire rear elevation of the main block, leaving none of the original exterior wall exposed.

As it appears today, the Green Street elevation of the ell is three stories tall and three bays deep. The first two stories are laid in stretcher bond; the added-on third story is laid in seven-course American bond. Each story in each bay is articulated with 6/6 windows with jack arched lintels and beaded, molded surrounds. Change in the brickwork in this elevation indicates where the chimney originally projected between the first and second bays.

The northeast (rear) elevation is four bays wide with a wooden porch with stairs extending across the entire wall. The two exterior bays are filled with door openings with replacement doors; 6/6 windows are located in the two interior bays.

The northwest elevation has three bays of large 6/6 windows with jack-arched lintels and molded surrounds

Addition

Between 1930 and 1949, a three-story, one-bay-wide, two-bay-deep brick addition fronting on Duke of Gloucester Street was made to the southwest wall of the main building. This addition, clearly distinguished from the main block is generally unadorned with some commercial craftsman detailing reserved for the cornice line. The addition is constructed of brick, laid in a stretcher bond. The facade is lit with 2/2 windows on each of the three stories with jack-arched lintels and brick sills. The brick cornice--a parapet wall above a flat or sloped roof--has two corner piers and a central pediment. The southwest wall of the addition extends almost the full depth of the main block; it has no window openings. The northwest (rear) elevation is articulated with an irregular arrangement of windows and doors.

INTERIOR:

The interior of the Gloucester Apartments has been significantly altered in plan, materials and details, and is currently undergoing a major renovation. Throughout its history, the building has served as a single-family residence, multiple dwelling (apartments) and commercial office space. All that survives of substance in the house is the center hall, including the stair and interior casings to the principal door. The center hall is laid with the original random-width floorboards and features a straight-flight stair built against the southeast wall. The stair is late Federal in appearance, characterized by a paneled wall, stringer brackets, and an attenuated round newel post, crooked rail, and square balusters. The main entry is elegantly surrounded with molded pilaster casing with three central reeds flanked by ogee profiles. The casings encircles the original fanlight above, interrupted by the echinus molded lintel over the replacement door.

The apartment building at 144 Duke of Gloucester Street was constructed between 1823 and 1836¹ by either William M. Mason of Virginia or Sarah E. and Thomas Sands. Originally constructed as a single-family dwelling, the freestanding building was used as a boarding house at the turn of the 20th century, and then converted into an apartment house by 1913. The imposing brick building is presently under renovation.

SITE HISTORY

The property known as the Gloucester Apartments at 144 Duke of Gloucester Street was originally part of a larger parcel of land, designated as Lot 26, and surveyed by James Stoddert in 1718. At the time of the survey, Lot 26 was owned by Amos Garrett. Amos Garrett is believed to have been "the most prominent and by far the most successful" merchant in Annapolis from the first decade of the 18th century until his death in 1727.² Garrett, who served as the first mayor of Annapolis, apparently made his fortune lending money at interest and dealing with imported goods.³ Following Garrett's death, his heirs sold Lot 26 to Dr. Charles Carroll.⁴ By 1737, Carroll had purchased the adjoining lots designated Lots 25, 28, 29, 30 and 32. He also owned other non-contiguous property in Annapolis. In 1752, Green Street was laid, cutting through Lot 26 (and possibly part of Lot 25) from Main Street to Duke of Gloucester Street. Following this urban improvement, Carroll subdivided Lot 26 and advertised lots on both sides of Green Street

¹ The land records seem to indicate that the lot was unimproved at the time of its sale in 1823 and improved in 1836 when it again changed hands.

² Edward Papenfuse. In Pursuit of Profit, The Annapolis Merchants in the Era of the American Revolution, 1763-1805. (Baltimore, MD: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1975), p 13. Papenfuse places Garrett's death in 1728; however, his gravemarker, located in St. Anne's Church Yard shows his death date as March 8, 1727.

³ Despite the financial success he enjoyed throughout his lifetime, Garrett's body was arrested for debt after his death in 1727, and kept for seven days as was allowed by old law of England (Elihu Riley. The Ancient City: History of Annapolis in Maryland, 1649-1887. Annapolis, MD: Record Printing Office, 1887), p 76).

⁴ Dr. Charles Carroll was born in Ireland about 1691.

for sale or lease.⁵

In 1781, Charles Carroll, bequeathed his land holdings to his nephew, Nicholas Maccubbin, Jr., provided Maccubbin change his name to Carroll. The Maryland Gazette documented the official name change on June 5, 1783. Based upon advertisements found in the Maryland Gazette, it appears that in 1783 Nicholas Carroll began to lease off the lots on Green Street.⁶ The lot on which the dwelling at 144 Duke of Gloucester now stands was leased to Jacob Hurst in May 1784 for 99 years, along with two adjacent lots. The deed describes the lots as "40 feet on East side of Duke of Gloucester, north of Green Street, 100 feet in depth parallel to Greet Street."⁷

PROPERTY HISTORY

Jacob Hurst, referred to as "the peddler" is listed as a storekeeper in the 1783 Tax List.⁸ Following Jacob Hurst's death in 1792, his property, including the lease on Duke of Gloucester Street, was inherited by his son, John Hurst (1763-1841). According to the Federal Direct Tax of 1798, John Hurst was charged with six properties in the city of Annapolis. Hurst retained the lease of the Duke of Gloucester Street property until 1823, when the owner, Nicholas Carroll sold the lot to William W. and Ann Mason of Leesburg, Virginia.

BUILDING HISTORY

In 1836, Mason conveyed the property to Sally Eliza Sands for $350. The deed of sale indicated that the improved lot extended "...from the southeast corner of William Thompson's house on Greet Street, south 100 feet to Duke of Gloucester Street, west 89 feet to Thomas S. Brewer's house." The lot had been enlarged in the early part of the 19th century by the purchase of the parcels presently designated as 146-148 Duke of Gloucester Street. The building appears on the Coast and Geodetic Survey Map of Annapolis from 1844.

Throughout most of the 19th century, the single-family dwelling was owned and occupied by Sarah Eliza Sands and her husband Thomas Sands (1802-1883), a Captain in the United States Revenue Marine Service. In 1860, Thomas Sands was assessed for one house on Duke of Gloucester Street and one house on Green Street. In 1880, Sarah Sands died, leaving the property to her daughter Julia Sands Clason, and granddaughters Euphanie M. Clason Mallison and Elizabeth Clason.

The census for 1900 records that the building was occupied by tenant Anna Handy and her children, as well as several boarders. The census documents that Handy worked as a boarding house proprietor, indicating that the single-family dwelling had been converted into a boarding house.

In 1908, John Chesley Sands, acting as representative for the family, sold the property to William Duvall, Jr., who had mortgaged it to the Farmers National Bank for over $6,500. Upon the death of Duvall in circa 1910, the debt was assumed by Raymond L. Moss and Isaac Honberger as tenants in common. In an effort to renovate the building, Moss and Honberger borrowed additional funds from the Farmers National Bank, bringing the amount of the outstanding mortgage to $9,450. Having converted the single-family dwelling into apartments by 1913, Honberger conveyed his one-half interest in the property, which measured 56 feet on Duke of Gloucester Street and 99 feet on Green Street, to Moss in exchange for property on Compromise and Chestnut streets in 1914.

Raymond Moss retained ownership of the Gloucester Apartments until 1926, when it was sold to Polish-born Harry Ivrey, who owned a grocery on Compromise Street. According to the 1928-29 City Directories, the Gloucester Apartments contained four individual apartments. By the time Harry Ivrey died in 1949, the building had been added onto (by the one-bay-wide addition) and renovated to include nine apartments. The city directory indicates that Harry Ivrey's son Samuel Ivrey, who had inherited the property, had law offices on the first floor of the building. Samuel Ivrey died in 1993, devising his estate to his children, Harry Ivrey, Lisa I. Sherwin, and Jill I. Kaplan. The Ivrey heirs presently own the apartment building, which was under renovation at the time of the survey.

4. NOTABLE FEATURES, HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE AND DESCRIPTION OPEN TO PUBLIC The Gloucester Apartment building is the type of building that is an integral part of towns such as Boston and Portsmouth, N.H., however, such Federal town houses are the exception in Annapolis. Except for an unattractive addition on the west (should be removed), 144 has a symmetrical arrangement of 3 floors of 5 bays; windows are 6/6 and have splayed brick lintels. Central doorway is recessed and has a semi-circular fan light. Definitely worth restoration.
