

Capsule Summary of 168 Main Street (AA-564)

Built in the first decades of the 19th century as a single dwelling¹, 168 Main Street shares a common history with the former dwellings abutting it at 158-166 Main Street. Although it has been significantly altered over the years, the history of the building and its relationship to 158-166 Main Street provide an accurate understanding of the development of this block of Main Street in the 19th century.

The building at 168 Main Street abuts the former Federal dwellings at 158-166 Main Street to the southeast and extends along the narrow Andrews Alley to the northwest. The building was significantly altered in 1993 when a new facade was added to the historic building and interior materials and details were replaced.

The two-story, two-bay brick building consists of a storefront on the first story, two single windows on the second story and a brick parapet wall on the attic level. A two-story rear wing, built by 1885, extends from the rear of the original building to Francis Street, while a front addition to this rear wing, added between 1891 and 1897, is now a separate building designated 17 Francis Street.

Located along the densely commercial Main Street, 168 Main Street abuts the former Federal dwellings at 158-166 Main Street to the southeast and extends along the narrow Andrews Alley to the northwest. Sharing a common history with 158-166 Main Street, 168 Main Street was similarly constructed in the mid-19th century. The building was significantly altered in the mid-20th century when a new facade was added to the historic building and interior materials and details were replaced.

The two-story, two-bay brick building consists of a storefront on the first story, two, single windows on the second story and a brick parapet wall on the attic level. A two-story rear wing, built by 1885, extends from the rear of the original building to Francis Street, while a front addition to this rear wing, added between 1891 and 1897, is now a separate building designated 17 Francis Street.

The front elevation, refaced in a rough brick, all-stretcher bond, has a modern first story storefront with a recessed side-passage entry and show windows. The side-passage entry features double wood and glass doors; the show windows, set upon a granite foundation with a brick sill, are three, long and narrow plateglass windows. A wooden frame surrounds the door and windows, while an oval nameplate on center of the surround advertises the store name. A stepped brick cornice above the storefront provides visual separation between the first and second stories. The second story has two, 6/6 windows set directly into the brick. A two-brick wide stringcourse separates the second story from the attic level. The attic level, a brick parapet wall, features two, rectangular recessed panels and a flat cornice.

The northwest elevation, facing Andrews Alley, is the only vestige of the 1820-1840 building on the site. This wall, laid in a three-course American bond, extends back to where the rear addition abuts.¹ The joining of rear walls is clearly delineated in the brickwork on this side elevation. The two walls together are significantly bowed, due to stress over the years. Together they have nine windows on the second story (five on the main building facing Main Street; four on the rear wing). The windows alternate between long, 6/1 windows and shorter 6/1 windows, both with wood sills, and flush with the brick wall surface.

The rear elevation, built onto the rear wing between 1891 and 1897, is laid in a five-course American brick bond. A single wood panelled door with 10-light side light is surmounted by a hipped roof overhang, clad with wood shingles. A header lintel, above the door and altered brickwork, extends beyond the door to the southeast, indicating that a larger opening at one time adorned this elevation.

The interior of the building has an open first floor with no original materials visible or intact. A tiled floor covers the original flooring, furred out drywall walls are located against all the walls, and a dropped ceiling with fluorescent lighting covers the original ceiling. The second floor, similarly altered, has a long hall with drywall rooms partitioned off of it. The front room which looks out over Main Street serves as the office of the store. The 6/6 replacement windows are set into the wall and have no trim or other original detailing.

Built in the first decades of the 19th century as a single dwelling², 168 Main Street shares a common history with the former dwellings abutting it at 158-166 Main Street. Although it has been significantly altered over the years, the history of the building and its relationship to 158-166 Main Street provide an accurate understanding of the development of this block of Main Street in the 19th century.

The land on which 168 Main Street is located originally occupied a portion of the triangular lot of ground that is designated Lot 72 on the Stoddert Map of 1718. In 1721 the lot was sold to Thomas Bordley and included a "house built by Benjamin Fordham."³ Upon Thomas Bordley's death in 1726, the land was inherited by his son, Stephen, who, in 1753 sold the lot to James Maccubbin. In 1753 and 1758, James Maccubbin sold a portion of lot 72 (80 feet at north of lot 72) to James Dick, but held onto the remaining portion. In 1776, James Maccubbin died intestate, leaving no direct heirs to his property. In 1788, Maccubbin's nephew, James Maccubbin Lingan gained ownership of the land. Following his inheritance that same year, Lingan advertised the property with "two brick dwellings and a small frame house" for sale. In 1790, Absalom Ridgely purchased the property from Lingan for L100.

Between 1790 and 1798 Absalom Ridgely advertised for sale "two unimproved lots on Church Street", indicating that the earlier mentioned improvements had been demolished. In 1799, William Coe bought from Ridgely a portion of the property which today corresponds with 162-168 Main Street. In 1832, Ridgely sold the portion of land which corresponds with 152-160 Main Street to Dennis Claude, Jr. for $1800. Two years later, in 1834 Dennis Claude, Jr. bought Coe's portion of the lot for $1300, thereby amassing that portion of lot 72 which today corresponds with 152-168 Main Street. At that time, it seems that no buildings were located on the property.

² The date of construction was based upon land record research and the on-site examination. Chancery records from 1858 describe a "two-story house and lot on Main Street and back along 'Cabbage Alley' to Francis Street". This reference to an existing building on the site by 1858 is confirmed by the brick side walls, laid in a three-course brick bond, and indicating an 1820-1840 date of construction.

Based upon the on-site survey, the building at 168 Main Street was erected on the site ca. 1820-1840 and can be seen on the 1858 Sachse print of Annapolis. It is first mentioned in deed transactions in 1858 following the death of its owner, Dennis Claude, in 1856. According to the Chancery record NHG 6/489, Dennis Claude owned, among other properties, "a brick two-story house and lot on Main Street and back along 'Cabbage Alley' to Francis Street." This description corresponds with the brick building located at 168 Main Street and Andrews Alley, formerly known as Cabbage Alley.

The property at 158-168 Main Street was inherited by his children, Susan Claude, Marion Claude and Phoebe A. Claude. Phoebe Claude gained ownership of the house at 168 Main Street, while Susan inherited the three houses at 158-166 Main Street, and Marion became owner of 152-156 Main Street.

In 1882, Phoebe Claude sold her inheritance, 168 Main Street, to her sister Susan and her husband, John Morris. John and Susan Morris retained ownership of all four houses at 158-168 Main Street until 1902, when they gave their son, Henry all of their property in Anne Arundel County, including the property at 158-168 Main Street. During their ownership, the building at 168 Main Street served commercial purposes on the first floor; in 1885 the building is shown as a newsroom on the Sanborn Map and from 1891 until at least 1903 it is shown as a millinery store.

In 1908, Henry Morris sold the property out of Morris family hands; that same year the building is shown as vacant on the Sanborn map. Following the Morris family ownership of the property in 1908, the property, including all three buildings, eventually was owned by the Samaras Family. From 1913 until 1921, the building had a restaurant on the first floor. The restaurant was replaced by 1930, by a drugstore, while another restaurant, known as the Boardroom, was located in the building during the 1950s.⁴

The Samaras family conveyed the property in 1936 to Benjamin Michaelson. Michaelson, born 1892, attended St. Johns College, graduating in 1912. He served as a Second Lieutenant in the United States Army in World War I. After attending Georgetown University

⁴ The current owners of the property have a ca. 1950 photograph of 168 Main Street when it was the Boardroom Restaurant.

Law School in 1922, Michaelson served as an Associate Judge for the 5th Judicial Circuit.⁵ By 1940, Michaelson conveyed the property to Pete and Effie Bounelis.

The Bounelis Family owned the building until 1966 when it was conveyed to the Annapolis Federal Savings and Loan Association. Following the building's use as a bank for almost 20 years, it was sold to the Maryland State Teachers Association. The Teachers Association occupied the building for 10 years. Recently conveyed and renovated, the building is owned and occupied by the gift shop, The Pewter Chalice.

168 Main Street is a 19th C. commercial structure, a smaller version of its Greek Revival neighbor, 170 Main. The 1st floor has been recently restored to match the rest of the building which has two (6/6) upstairs windows with shutters. Above the windows are two recessed panels and a simple brick cornice. 168 is part of a fine row running from 158 to 170 Main Street. 168 and 170 form an alley up to Francis Street, such alleys do much to enhance the charm of Annapolis.
