

Capsule Summary of 184-186 Main Street (AA-570)

Built in 1899,¹ Gottlieb's Department store was constructed within the well-established commercial center of Annapolis. This building was originally part of a large tract of land associated with William Bladen that was subdivided and developed as early as 1790. Despite its significant first-story alterations, the building survives as a fine example of the Italian Renaissance style, not commonly found in Annapolis. In addition, the building was built as a local department store by the Gottlieb family and remained in family hands as such until 1939.

A substantial two-story brick structure designed in an Italian Renaissance Revival style, the building is rectangular in plan and extends from Main Street back to State Circle. It is attached on the southeast side and extends, on the northwest side, along a narrow alley leading to State Circle. The building is set upon a brick foundation, is constructed of brick laid in a six-course bond, and is covered with a sloped roof. As shown on the 1903 Sanborn Map, the building was originally divided into three spaces: the front store running the width of the building, and two rear spaces divided longitudinally. Although the building retains its original massing and second story details, it has been altered on the interior and has suffered from significant alterations on the first story.

¹The building does not appear on the 1897 Sanborn Maps; however it does appear on the 1903 Sanborn Maps, designated as Gottlieb's Department Store. A historic photograph, dated 1899, shows the building under construction. (MdHR G 2140-34: Main Street, toward City Dock).

Constructed in 1899 as Gottlieb's Department Store, the building at 184-186 Main Street is a substantial two-story brick structure designed in an Italian Renaissance Revival style. The building is rectangular in plan and extends from Main Street back to State Circle. It is attached on the southeast side and extends, on the northwest side, along a narrow alley leading to State Circle. The building is set upon a brick foundation, is constructed of brick laid in a six-course bond, and is covered with a sloped roof. As shown on the 1903 Sanborn Map, the building was originally divided into three spaces: the front store running the width of the building, and two rear spaces divided longitudinally. Although the building retains its original massing and second story details, it has been altered on the interior and has suffered from significant alterations on the first story.

The front elevation, consists of a significantly altered first story storefront, the original second story paired arched openings and the original bracketed cornice and parapet. The brick facade at the second story, is laid in an all-stretcher bond and features smooth pressed brick. Based upon an historic photograph¹, the first story storefront consisted, in ca. 1925, of large projecting plateglass show windows separated by columns and surrounded by a wood surround. After 1925, the first story was modified and today consists of a brick wall surface with three large arched openings. The central opening leads to a sort of covered vestibule which in turn opens into a store on one side and a restaurant on the other. The flanking arched openings are filled with plateglass windows.

The second story consists of three groups of paired arched windows. The windows, are all set within a slightly recessed wall surface with corbelled bricks creating a three-dimensional relief pattern. The corbelled bricks forme a cornice and the raised brick surface at the ends create end pilasters or piers. The windows have arched brick surrounds, a recessed brick panel between each pier, and are filled with 8/8 sash with a fanlight above.

The overhanging and bracketed metal cornice is supported by four pairs of brackets extending across the width of the building. Located between the brackets and supporting the cornice soffit are three groups of seven modillions. A parapet wall with a central projecting panel culminates at the roofline. Sunburst motifs decorate either end of the central projecting panel.

The unattached northwest side elevation extends along the narrow alley leading to State Circle and reveals the brick walls laid in a six-course bond. This elevational wall has, on the first story, three segmental brick arches--at one time openings and now infilled with brick. The second story has five 6/6 windows with concrete sills. A large ventilation duct projects from this side wall and extends from ground level to above the roofline.

The northeast elevation, faces State Circle and because of the change in the grading rises only two stories in height. This elevation has three openings on the first story. A central arched opening with double glass doors leads to the India Palace Restaurant which also has an entrance on Main Street. An arched window opening next to this entrance is boarded up. An altered double entry with glass doors and a Colonial Revival surround leads to the office space which occupies this rear section of the building. On the second story are three 1/1 windows with segmental arches. A brick parapet wall projects above the second story.

The interior of the building consists of a restaurant which extends from the front to the rear of the building on its northwest side, and a store and office building on the southeast side. The store occupies the space facing Main Street, while the office building opens onto State Circle. Much of the original plan and all of the original detail in the store and restaurant are gone. According to the Planning and Zoning Property Files, the wood ceiling was replaced in 1986 with a drop ceiling. The second floor was not surveyed.

In addition, the building was built as a local department store by the Gottlieb family and remained in family hands as such until 1939.

At the request of William Bladen, the owner of the property in 1718, Lot 72 was surveyed and documented on the Stoddert Map of 1718. William Bladen, born February 27, 1673 in Hemsworth, Yorkshire, England, was the son of Nathaniel and Isabella (Fairfax) Bladen.³ Within months of purchasing Lot 72, Bladen died, bequeathing his property to his son, Colonel Thomas Bladen. Thomas Bladen, born in 1698, served as Governor of Maryland from 1742 to 1747. Bladen died in England in 1780.⁴

Thomas Bladen had his agents convey Lot 72 along with the brick house constructed by Benjamin Fordham to Thomas Bordley in 1721 for L30.⁵ Thomas Bordley, born in Yorkshire, England about 1682, was the son of Stephen Bordley. Thomas came to Kent County, Maryland in 1694. Educated as an attorney, Bordley served as Attorney General of Maryland from 1715 to 1726. Following his death in London on October 11, 1726, his vast land holdings in Annapolis were devised to his son, Stephen Bordley.⁶ Stephen Bordley, born about 1710, was the eldest surviving son of Thomas Bordley. Stephen, also an attorney, served as Commissary General of

Province. He died in December 1764.⁷

Stephen Bordley resurveyed all 22 of the Annapolis lots that he inherited in 1726.⁸ By 1753, Bordley conveyed lot 72 to James Maccubin for L350 in currency. The conveyance included a "brick house and lot, late in occupation, Hugh Kennedy, innholder, since in occupation, John Jordon, hatter, now occupied by Stephen Bordley, and pew on west side of church."⁹ Maccubin owned the property until his death about 1788 when his heirs relinquished claim to James Lingan.¹⁰ In 1790, Lingan conveyed the southeastern portion of the lot to Absalom Ridgely for L1000 in currency.¹¹ Ridgely, born in May 1747, worked as a merchant in Annapolis.¹²

The Federal Direct Tax of 1798 charges Absalom Ridgely as owner of a two-story brick dwelling (50x20) and a brick stable (20x30) on Church Street, with James West as tenant.¹³ In 1801, Ridgely conveyed the portion of lot 72 fronting on Church Street, which included the tavern occupied by Captain James West, to William Glover for $3000.00.¹⁴ Following the purchase, Glover subdivided the lot into street addresses and development commenced.

The Maryland Gazette advertised the sale of Glover's house and West's Tavern in 1802.¹⁵ John Wheeler, purchased part of the house occupied by Captain West in March of 1803 for $1,100.00, and in July purchased additional property fronting on State Circle.¹⁶ Following the death of Wheeler in 1804, the property was bequeathed to Sarah Cornish Wheeler.¹⁷ Within a year of becoming a widow, Sarah Wheeler married Leonard Scott. At that time the property was assessed and the Chancery Court records noted that Henry Matthews was a tenant in the building at 184-186 Main Street.¹⁸

In 1817, the Scotts conveyed the property to Henry Price in the form of a trust established for John Henry Scott, and eventually Lucy Scott Ward.¹⁹ When John Henry died without heirs the property was escheated (it was taken over by the State of Maryland due to the lack of heirs capable of inheriting under the original grant).²⁰ In 1837, Henry Matthews, a tenant on the property since 1804, applied to get the patent on the escheated land. The application was rejected as Lucy Scott Ward was legally entitled to the property by the 1817 trust, though she had never assumed ownership. The case remained in the Appeals Courts until 1841 when Henry Matthews was awarded the property.²¹

The same year Matthews obtained ownership of the property on Main Street, it was awarded to Alexander Russell, Jr., John Berry, and Francis Berry in a Judgement of Court for $60.00 damages incurred through debt. The deed of conveyance documents that the building was occupied by John H. Neall and was sold at a public sale to the highest bidder.²² John S. Selby, Sheriff, conveyed it to James Iglehart and Richard J. Cowman in 1843 for $9,090.00.²³ Richard J. Cowman, the son of Thomas Cowman, was married in 1829 to Harriet Green (c1808-1882). Cowman died in 1854.²⁴ The Iglehart and the Cowman families were related by marriage.

In 1850, Iglehart and Cowman placed the property in the name of James Iglehart's wife, Eliza.²⁵ Eliza Iglehart conveyed it in 1884 to James Edward Tate.²⁶ James E. Tate, born about 1863, was married to Lelia R. Ireland.²⁷ Within a month Tate conveyed it to Francis H. Tate.²⁸ According to the Sanborn Maps from 1885 through 1897, the property contained a two-story brick grocery and a three-story brick dwelling.

Francis Tate sold the property in 1898 to Leon and Bessie Gottlieb. Leon Gottlieb, born about 1863, was married to Bessie Edlavitch, who was born in Russia.²⁹ The Gottlieb's demolished the existing buildings and constructed a two-story brick department store. Gottlieb's Department Store was owned and operated by the Gottliebs until 1939, when Leon Gottlieb died in 1939. It was obtained by Alvin F. Polan, who altered the building to accommodate two separate stores.³⁰ The city directory for 1949 and 1954 indicate that 184 Main Street was occupied by "Lad 'n Lassie children's clothing," while 186 contained "Berman's woman's clothing." The Polan family owned the building until 1958 when it was sold to Maurice F. Klawans.

Maurice F. Klawans, a physician, was married to Steela J. Goldman, the daughter of Dr. Charles Goldman.³¹ In 1966, Klawans conveyed

4. NOTABLE FEATURES, HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE AND DESCRIPTION OPEN TO PUBLIC yes

A grandiose Victorian structure, 184 Main Street has a massive cornice with a panel in the center and simple brackets and modillions underneath. 2nd storey has elaborate brick work with 3 pairs of Gibbsean windows, surrounded by brick arches set against a recessed wall. The ground floor, recently restored by James Wood Burch, uses 3 giant arches and shows how modern architecture can understand a building's past sensitively. Building is same scale as 180 Main adjacent to it.
