Description:

This is a two bay wide, three story high, brick structure which shares an interior with the adjacent building, 203 Davis Street. The first story has been filled in and does not have any door. A small, square window with diamond shaped panes is located on the first floor level which is capped by a simple cornice. The second and third stories have two, nine over nine windows set in brick segmental arches. There is an elaborate cornice at the roofline with dentil molding and decorative end brackets.

Significance:

Area: architecture.

Level: local

This small structure next door to 203 Davis Street appears to have been built in the mid nineteenth century. It is in good condition. The building features brick segmental arches, diamond shaped window panes and an elaborate cornice with dentil molding and decorative end brackets. This building was a dwelling as late as 1932, and overall it contributes to the historic character of the area.
