DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
Originally the Baltimore Club-house, this gabled Queen Anne building was constructed in 1895. Built of quarried red sandstone and thin, elongated brick laid in stretcher bond, the building is now used for commercial purposes. The first level of the building is finished in quarried stone, into which a cellar way, running parallel to the facade, is let. Above the cellar way is a large oriel window which has been infilled with modern decorative concrete block. To the right of the oriel is the main entranceway, reached by a flight of stone steps. Low walls flank the stairway, and the shallow porch holds two stone seats which flank the entranceway. The open entrance vestibule is framed by finished stone moldings which are carved with leafy reliefs at the corner junctures. At the second level, a gabled projection extends perpendicularly from the major gabled portion of the house. Rendered completely in brick, the projecting section has a triple set of single light windows with transoms while the main section has a double set of the same windows of a slimmer variety. Vertical divisions are of small molded bricks, while the horizontal transom bars and flat lintels are of sandstone. The triple set is fronted by a low stone wall rising from the oriel below, while the double set is fronted by a row of short stone posts infilled with ornamental iron grillwork. At the third level, smaller, double gable end windows are finished with the same detail as those below, while above them are two slit-like, single paned end-lights. A gabled roof dormer with gable end skirt is supported on spindle, bracketed posts, rendered in stone. Originally roofed with Spanish tiles, asbestos shingles now cover the roof.
