Notable features:

This building should be kept. It could be used for apartments, lofts for artists, or others requiring or desiring large spaces, or for office space. The big arched door on Carrollton Street is massive and dignified, the window pattern simple and functional. It is a good sturdy building. If it is to continue in light industrial use, a better solution to the first floor windows should be found, and painting should be more creative than striking a high water mark.

Environmental context:

In a street with housing of good quality in it. Opposite school building and cemetery wall, overlooking St. Luke's to the south. Parking at rear and big trees in space behind.
