DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This three bay wide, two story high building stands at the end of a row of thirteen similar structures on a corner site. Six additional structures, to the east of 113 W. Ostend on the other side of an alley are similarly styled to these as well. All structures have been covered with formstone of a variety of patterns.

A flight of five marble steps set against the base lead to the entrance on the left. To the right, a pair of square basement windows are filled with wire mesh.

Wall openings, originally segmental arched, have been sheathed with flared, rusticated formstone lintels of a darker shade than the rest of the facade. Sills have also been sheathed with the darker covering.

An aluminum storm door and transom are positioned in front of the Queen Anne wood and glass door and rectangular transom.

Storm and interior windows are double hung with 1/1 lights. At the roofline, a dentilled wooden cornice breaks into a pedimental parapet with a horizontal kick at either side.

The rear sloping shed roof is masked by the side wall which falls in 3 descending steps from front to back. The front rooms of the building have no side fenestration. Segmental arched openings set irregularly fenestrate the middle and rear rooms. A three sided oriel window projects from the second floor middle room. An additional, aluminum sided room projection extends from the second floor rear of the building. The entire side wall has been stuccoed.

Variations in the facades of the other houses are created by the omission of a roofline parapet, or by the use of semicircular rather than pedimental parapets.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

113 W. Ostend Street stands in a row which is a modest version of the more elaborate Edwardian rows which were built in Peabody Heights and Reservoir Hill. Entirely sheathed in formstone, this row stands near the Spring Gardens Works of the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company. The red holding tanks form a backdrop for this end of Sharp-Leadenhall.
