The three story, two and three bay wide brick houses lining this side of Warren Ave. were built for a middle class market and are much larger and more commodious than the average two story plus attic type of house built for nearby working class tenants. 202-220 Warren Ave. were all originally built with gable roofs but most have since been remodeled and now have shed roofs with bracketed cornices. 222-228 Warren Ave. were built in the 1870's in the currently fashionable Italianate style, with shed roofs and bracketed cornices. Each of these large, expensive houses is three bays wide and has a marble-faced basement. The first floor areas of 826-828 Warren Ave. now serve as an antique shop.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This three story, three bay brick house with shed roof represents the second phase of building along this side of Warren Ave., being built, along with its immediate neighbors, in the 1870's. It has been covered with formstone.

The house is three stories in height, 18 1/2' wide, and occupies a lot 95' deep. There is a three story high, one bay wide and deep stair hall extension which connects the main structure to a three story high, four bay deep rear addition. There is also an extra two story high, one bay deep addition. The house was constructed in running bond but it is now covered with formstone. The original wooden cornice is gone. There is a double rectangular chimney located along the eastern side of the house. There is also a rear end chimney located at the north-west corner of the rear addition, and along the west side wall of the addition.

The original form of the window lintels and sills has been hidden by the formstone covering. All of the window openings at the front of the house have 1/1 sash. The rear window of the front parlor, however, still has its original 2/4 sash. The side windows of the addition have 6/6 sash. A late Victorian glass and panel door, with a scroll-sawed pediment over the glass panel, is set beneath a single light transom with segmentally arched lintel. The house sits on a high basement, the entrance being reached by three brick steps. There are two rectangular basement openings with iron grates set beneath the first floor windows.

The floor plan of the house is essentially the same as that of 212 Warren Ave., with a single, deep front room and a long entrance hall on the first floor of the main section of the house. The stairs are located in an extension beyond the main house and rise to the second and third floors in an elegant rectangular, spiral pattern. There is a wide, elaborately turned newel post and turned balusters. The stair brackets have elaborate scroll-sawed outlines. Beyond the stair hall there is a dining room with fireplace and beyond that a kitchen with an extra set of stairs leading to the second floor. The mantels of the parlor and dining room are quite Victorian in flavor, with applied scroll-sawed panels on the pilasters and freize areas, and the mantel shelves supported by carved brackets with applied medallions. The shelves themselves have a scroll-sawed profile.
