DESCRIPTION:

The two-and-one-half-story brick house is located on the east side of North Poppleton Street. The two-bay facade has a raised basement and a passage to the rear alley. The door and window openings are boarded except one second story window. The flat arches are gauged brick and the sills are wood. The passage opening has a wood lintel. The steps to the door are concrete, probably a replacement of the original marble or wood stoop. A plain steel pipe handrail is attached to the left edge of the steps. A small corbeled brick cornice is fronted by a gutter. The asphalt-covered roof has a single central dormer which is boarded. The interior chimney stack is shared with 117 North Poppleton.

SIGNIFICANCE:

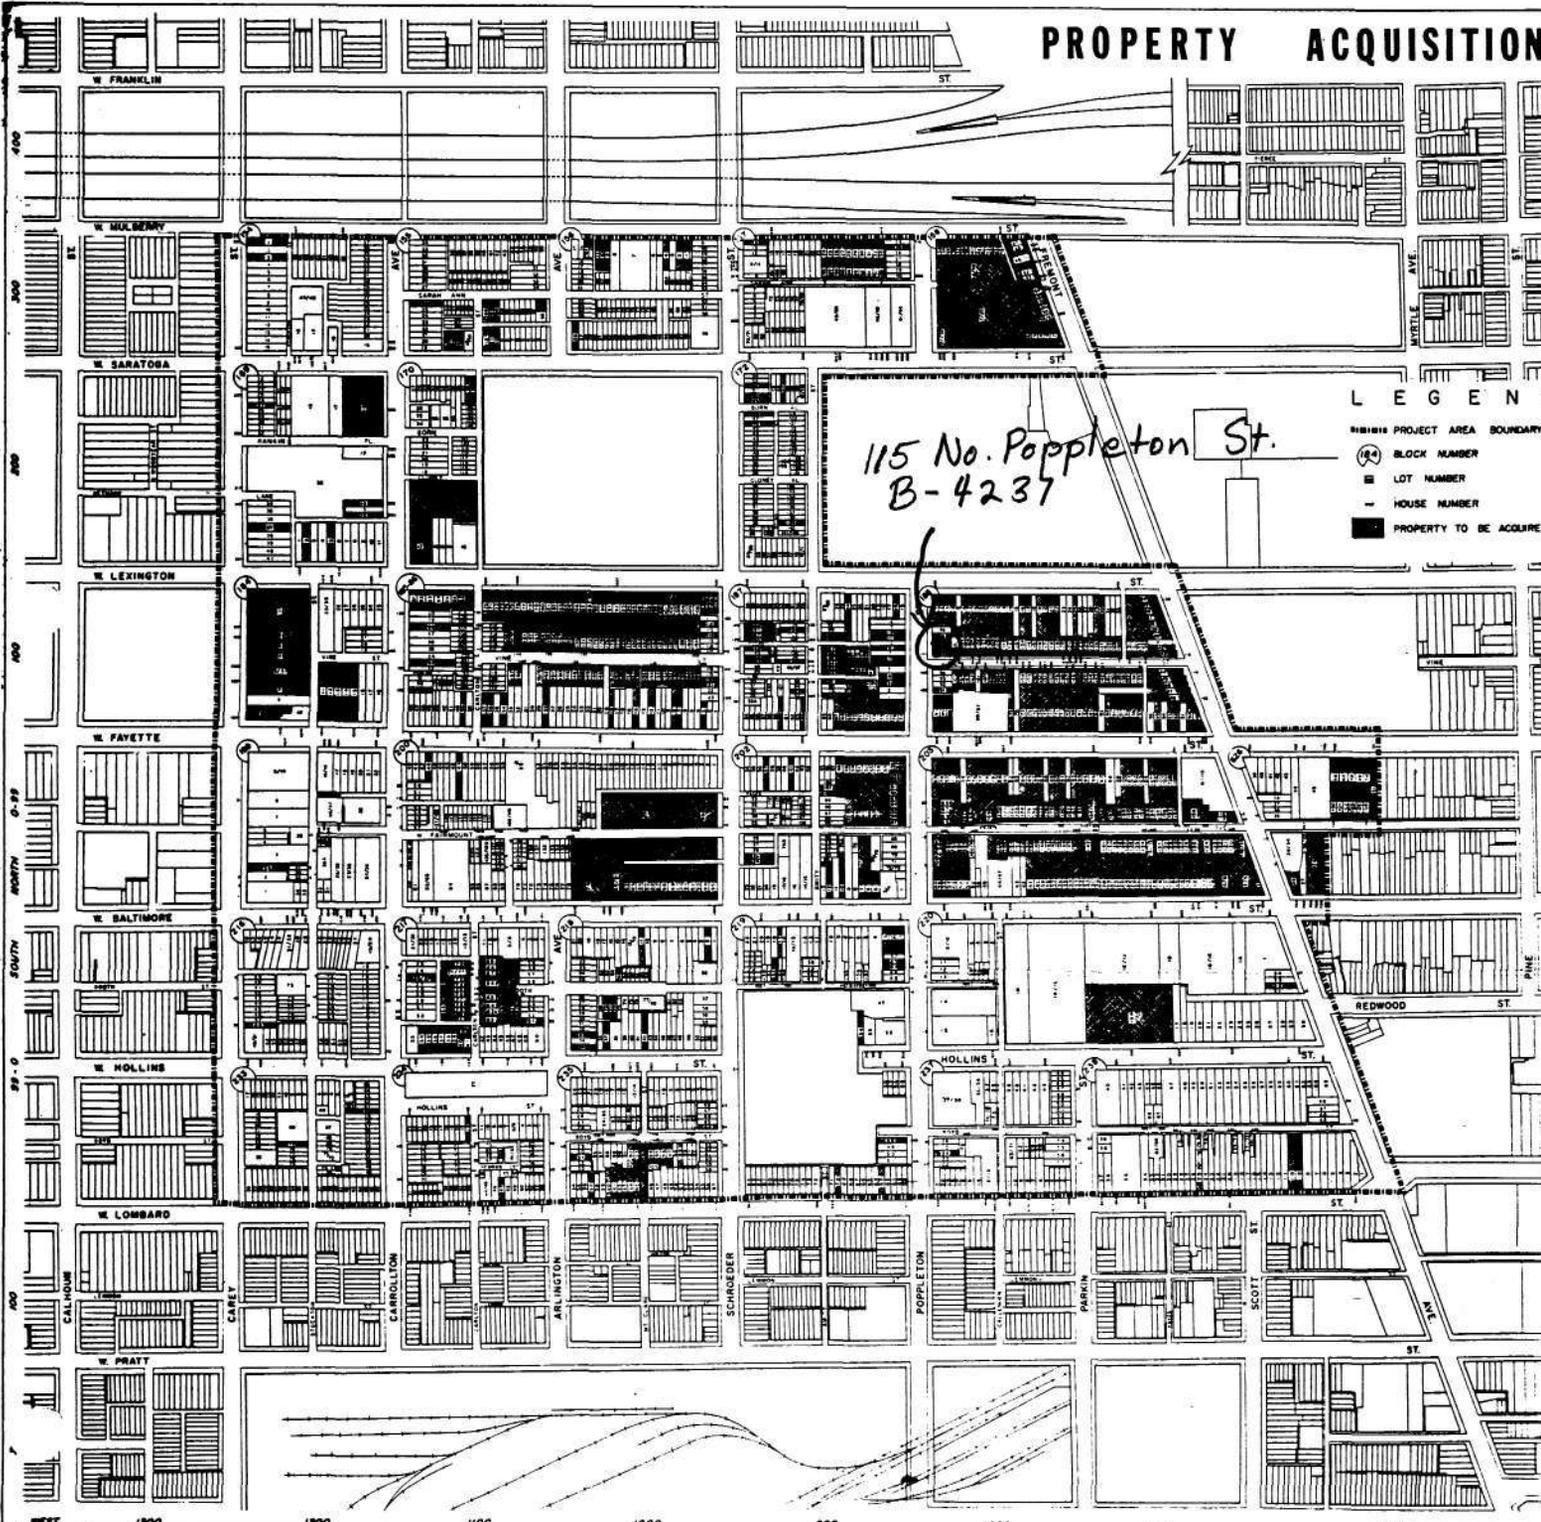

AREA: Architecture LEVEL: Local

The house at 115 North Poppleton Street is a good example of the early nineteenth century rowhouse form with a gable roof and dormer, high basement, and a passage. It contributes to an undefined potential historic district of similar building types.
