

19-21 E. CHESAPEAKE AVE.

Those blocks of Chesapeake Ave. nearest York Rd. have nearly lost all traces of ever having been residential areas. # 19-21 E. Chesapeake, however, is still being used for the residential purposes that it was designed to have in the 1920's. It is a two story frame structure whose fenestration belongs to the Victorian era. The building is also evidence of the fact that the duplex was a significant housing type in Towson.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This is one of the buildings that suggest that the duplex was a significant type of housing in Towson. It is a two story frame structure which is the equivalent of being three bays wide and four deep. It has a gable-end roof and longitudinal plan with the entrances occupying the interior bays of the south facade.

The fenestration is regular in placement although it is noticed that where most of the windows are 1/1 sash the first story windows of the south end are tall 2/2 sash. A six light casement vents the south gable. The building was only examined from the street although it can be assumed from the fenestration that there is a front room containing a stairs on the inner wall, middle area and kitchen on each side. One of the interior bays on the side wall is windowless because of an interior flue chimney but all of the other rooms are well lighted by at least one but usually two windows. The entrance doors also contain 2/2 panes of glass in their upper half.

The south facade faces the street and is characterized by the larger gable, the entrances and by the full single story porch. Like the rest of the building the porch is divided in half by the same railing that surrounds the whole area. The railing consists of a banister with square balusters fixed in sections between the support posts. The posts are square and decorated with chamfers. Like the rest of the house the porch rests on a rock faced formstone foundation which elevates it the height of four steps above the ground. A small yard (c. 10' x 40') exists between the porch and sidewalk. It is landscaped with shrubbery and flowers and partially enclosed by a block wall which matches the foundation.
