DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The L-shaped two story building at # 111 E. Pennsylvania Ave. has been very much altered but there is still much structural evidence existing that proves this was one of Towson's 19th century residences. The 1877 Atlas suggests that this little building was here then and that Daniel Lee, owner of the large stone dwelling on the opposite side of the street, owned this parcel as well. It is probable that Lee rented or leased the property to a tenant. We see from the Bromley Atlas that the property was still part of the Lee estate in 1898.

Modern shopfronts and wooden shingles obscure the fact that this dwelling in its original state is two bays wide and one bay deep with a projection to the north on the west side. It is frame-and-clapboard and may be characterized by its simple gable-end roof. The 1 1/2 story projection to the North, which is perceived to be an addition has a shed roof.

The south portion or the wing that is closest to the street is perceived to be the front of the house and beneath it there is a basement which measures approximately 12' x 20'. It has uncoursed stone walls which incorporate a wedge shaped chimney buttress on the east end. An interior chimney exits the roof on the east end of the house.

The shed roofed north wing has no basement and rests on a low brick foundation.

The first level of the structure has been altered considerably. It is assumed that there were two front rooms plus the kitchen in the rear. The upstairs appears to have been divided into four rooms. The southeast room is still papered, has a flue chimney on the east wall, and is characterized by the trapezoidal ceiling common to the half-story. The walls of this story are only five feet high.

What was probably the east parlor on the first floor was examined and although modern paneling covers all original fabric, an interior chimney projection was observed which is 54" wide and 23" deep.
