DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

A long, two-story, stone building with a gable roof, ridge on the long axis--the roof is standing-seam metal with three large metal ventilators along the ridge. No original fittings remain in the interior. The facade (SW elevation) is a balanced arrangement of nine bays, grouped in threes. The two end groups consist of a large entrance flanked by superimposed windows; the central group consists of windows.

There is a stone-faced mill race to the northwest (up river) of the mill, which empties into the river.
