DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

FERNWOOD is a frame house, two and one half storeys in height, its south facade expressed as four bays in length, its north as six bays in length. It dates from 1920-1940. Exterior walls are sheathed in wide weatherboards and the slated gabled roof rises above a wide modilioned cornice with bold eave returns under the rakes. Five arched dormers are in each roof slope. Brick interior chimneys rise at the ridge near the east end, in the southerly slope near the middle of the house and in the northerly slope near the west end. The south facade faces a broad view of the valley and it is sheltered by a one-storey trellis. The north facade is the principal entrance; there a small one-storey projecting vestibule has a door with sidelights and semi-elliptical transom and a six-light casement is on either side. Typical windows of the north facade and the ends are 4/4 but windows in the end bays of the south facade, second storey, are 6/6 and those of the two middle bays there are tall casements. A series of contemporary sliding glass doors in the first storey, south front, opens to the south trellised terrace. All windows have louvred blinds.

A central hall extends through the house and the principal staircase is immediately east of the hall at the north facade. Two rooms are to the west, the southwesterly the larger and the dining room is east of the hall. A breakfast room is in the southeast corner of the house and the kitchen is in the north-east corner. The entire south wall is glazed with sliding doors, each a single piece of glass. Other original detailing remains unaltered including mantels in each principal room, trim and doors, all recalling the eighteenth century.

Fernwood was built in about 1896 by George and Fannie Winchester Brown. H. Carroll Brown, trustee for Fannie Winchester Brown, sold Fernwood at his father's death to Robert N. Sloan and his wife, Louise L., on July 10, 1903. At that time the property contained 97.9 acres.² The Sloans lived in Fernwood during Mr. Sloan's lifetime and Mrs. Sloan continued on there alone for a short time following his death,³ before she sold the house and 46 acres to her adjoining western property owner, Mrs. Catherine Ottolie Young Wickes on November 11, 1926.⁴ Mrs. Wickes' daughter, Catherine Ottolie Wickes and her husband, Daniel Brewster, moved into Fernwood.⁵ After her mother's death Mrs. Brewster purchased Fernwood from the other heirs in Mrs. Wickes' estate for $23,033.34 on the 24th of January, 1944.⁶ Mrs. Brewster was widowed, raised her children and was remarried to William F. Cochran while residing at Fernwood.⁷ On February 15, 1952, she sold Fernwood with 45 acres to W. Bladen Lowndes and his wife, Anne Watson.⁸ The Lowndes lived in Fernwood for eleven years before selling it on September 20, 1963, to Dr. Edgar F. Berman and his wife, Phoebe, the present owners.⁹

At George Brown's death in 1902, his wife sold Fernwood to Robert N. Sloan.¹ At that time the 3-story frame building was 40 x 50 feet with a wide veranda encircling the house. All of the rooms on the first floor opened onto this porch. There were twenty-five rooms in all, the majority of which contained large old-fashioned, opengrate fireplaces.³ . . . During the twentieth century the house underwent major architectural change.⁴
