DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

THE BRIARS is an irregularly-shaped two storey house of frame construction finished in stucco. It dates from the first decade of the twentieth century. Its principal facade is to the west and a projecting gable with porte-cochere marks the principal entrance. A second gable projects from the north end of the west facade. Most original windows are double or triple wooden casements, each sash with three horizontal panes. Principal chimneys rise internally at the south gable end and internally at an equal distance north of the projecting entrance gable. A one-storey glazed porch extends across the east facade, a balustrade around its flat roof.

Within the principal entrance is a wide hall; the open staircase has its intermediate landing above the principal entrance; its traditional details are modern replacements of the originals. Wide double doors open to a large living room throughout the depth of the south end of the house, a library is directly east of the central hall and a dining room is north of the central hall. Originally glazed with horizontal lights like the casement windows most of the doors have been replaced with modern paneled doors and the plain original trim has had a modern moulding added as a backband. Original doors remain between the library and the east porch. The living and dining rooms have ceilings with beams expressed, edged with mouldings, all original details. The natural pine paneling of the library is also original with its chamfered stiles and rails applied over vertical boards. The principal rooms have fireplaces.

A small frame PLAYHOUSE is directly behind the dwelling, two bays in depth, its gabled roof projecting forward of its front or west facade forming a porch screened with ornamental lattice-work. Windows have diamond lights described by wooden muntins in their upper sashes with a single light below and they are flanked by louvred blinds.

The small BARN-GARAGE across the lawn northwest of the dwelling is of frame, one and one-half storeys in height. The principal section of the structure is three bays in width; a north wing provides a stable in the lower storey, a hay loft in the upper; a south wing has had its south wall glazed between the original studs with skylights added in the roof, converting it to a greenhouse. A deep pent roof across the principal or east facade shelters a range of double doors opening into the garage, each with perimeter and 'X' stiles and rails over vertical wainscoting in the lower two-thirds of the door, and each having a six-light window above.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

THE BRIARS is an ample house, designed for entertaining with interior spaces opening for maximum circulation; dating from the first decade of the twentieth century its simplicity of detail reflects the then-current Colonial-revival style, its complexity in mass the picturesque medieval-revivals. The small barn-garage is an original dependency reflecting the suburban setting of the house.

The property known as the Briars was originally part of a tract of 81 acres owned by Joseph and Annette H. Hopkins adjacent to the Chattolanee Hotel property. The original house on this site was built by the Hopkins' family as a summer cottage. In the early 1900's the house was rented to Herbert and Rose Wagner. However, while the Wagners were renting, the building was burned down. It was rebuilt, allegedly by Mr. Wagner, who continued to rent the property until he purchased it in 1929. The house which was rebuilt in 1911 is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. William F. Blue who have done extensive remodelling.
