DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

505 GARRISON FOREST ROAD is a two storey frame house, a very simple example of the American Queen Anne style. Its principal front, the west, is a broad gable end and that gable roof extends back to cover a deep rectangular house. A small gable projects to the south, its walls forming a bay with diagonal sides, each with a window. A one storey porch extends across the west front wrapping around the southwest corner to terminate at the projecting south bay window. Typical windows are 1/1 with louvered blinds.

Within, a large entrance hall extends across the entire west front, an open stair at its north side, a fireplace at its south. The stair details are traditional, modern ones but the mantel is contemporary with the house, slim Tuscan columns supporting a shelf, the paneled frieze extending between the columns. Interior openings are trimmed with plain corner-block work and many of the doors are missing. Two rooms are east of the front one, the southeast one having the bay window, and the kitchen is in an east wing at the north side. A secondary stair is at the east end of the house on the south side. The second floor plan is similar and its details are simpler.
