DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The St Joseph's Parochial School buildings are located on the south side of Church Lane in Texas, south of and partially obscured by the west transept of the church. The complex is made up of three stone buildings which are either built against or attached to each other.

The first structure was built in 1867 and replaced an earlier, one room stone building that was built about 1853 and burned to the ground in 1861/62. It was built of stone furnished free by the Beaver Dam Marble Works. Volunteers were called for and so many responded that the foundations were laid in one day. The building is approximately 25 X 50 feet, with its long axis north - south. It has a longitudinal hip roof and inside chimneys on east and west. All windows are double hung 6/6 lite with stone lintels and sills. Four panel wood doors with transom bars were located on the south and north facades. The latter door has been removed. The structure when built had four bays on east and west. The west facade was altered in 1946 by the addition of a new two story building perpendicular to the earlier one. The second school is also built of coursed stone approximately 27X25 feet. Its long axis is east - west. The building has a flat roof, and is three bays wide on the north and south facades. All windows are double hung 6/6 lite with stone lintels and sills. The double, half glass, entrance doors on the north have a wide stone lintel carved with the words "St Joseph's School"

In 1959, another school was built, on the south side and attached to the 1946 school by an above ground passage way. Although this building too is built of local stone, the stone is irregular and not as finely finished as in the other buildings. The structure is approximately 69X122 feet, with its long axis north - south. It is thoroughly modern in design with flat roof, aluminum windows and doors etc. It is two stories. The structure is built into the contours of the land.

The 1867 building originally had one large classroom in the basement. The upper two floors were divided into four classrooms. New flooring was put in, in 1919. In 1923 the interior was rennovated and iron stairways were added at the north and south entrance doors.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE		1959-E. Eyring&Sons-Builders

St Joseph's Parochial School buildings are important as an integral part of the street scape formed by the St Joseph's complex on Church Lane. The scale of the buildings and the use of local stone in construction is consistent with other buildings in the area. These structures have been adapted to the topography of the land. Maximum use of minimum space has been achieved.

The school has been an integral part of the Texas community since the first one room structure was built in 1853. (1) After the first school burned, classes were held, for the next few years, in several homes in the community. From 1867 - 1926 St Joseph's School was not Parochial in the strictest sense of the word. Although it stood on parish grounds and was owned by the church, it was supported and staffed by the Baltimore County School Commissioners. This was a result of the depressed economic conditions both before and after the Civil War. The school was open to all the children in Texas and the surrounding communities. This arrangement continued until 1926 when the Cockeyville Consolidated School opened.

The school has expanded as a result of ever rising number of pupils. It rose from about 78 in the early years to 84 in 1946 when the second structure was built. By 1952 this number had risen to 123, and again in answer to need the 3rd portion of the school was built with an enrollment of 462 and a waiting list. Finally in 1967 the second floor of the Parish Hall, on the north side of Church Lane, was adapted for four additional classrooms. The number of pupils had peaked to 750. In 1977 this number had leveled off to 445.

(1) Reference is made to this first school in deed HMF 6/313 " Received from Rev. Dalton guarentee sum of $520 in full for school house on the lot on which St Joseph's Church, Texas has been erected, to be paid on a notice of 90 days." Dated 20 October 1853
