HENDRIX-SALTYSIAK HOUSE

1922

PARKTON

PRIVATE

This large stucco-covered Colonial Revival 2-½ story dwelling is the most prominent house seen where the York Road ascends the hill at the north end of town. Its grounds originally contained the 25th milestone of the Baltimore and York Town Turnpike Road of 1809. Tax ledgers show that C. Webster Hendrix built the house in 1922, its dimensions 26 by 30. In 1937, Hendrix and wife sold to Dr. Andrew Menares France, who was in general practice around Parkton for 45 years. Dr. France founded a boy scout troop and the local rotary club. Dr. Leonard T. Saltysiak bought the house in 1951. The house, extensively renovated in 1980, is hip roofed, with a full-width front porch, its roof supported by wrought iron columns in a lacework design. The house is complex in its layout with a frame extension at the rear. The grounds are enclosed and entrance is by a lych gate.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Hendrix-Saltysiak house is a Colonial revival structure of 2½ stories with hip roof and dormers, a basically square house of side hall plan. The house is stucco-covered, its under walls not discernible.

There is a full width, hip-roofed front porch, several steps above grade. The roof is supported by columns of wrought iron lace, and railed in with wrought iron, and embellished under the roof cornice with wrought iron latticework. There are four bays opening onto the porch but only two bays at second-story level facing the porch roof. The porch door is set in the second bay from the south (or left). The windows are 1-over-1 double-hung sash types on the street facade and on the other three sides. At the time of the survey, the space under the porch was being walled in with concrete block. A plain wooden cornice runs around the outer walls just under the overhanging roof eaves.

The house is two bays deep with windows at both first and second stories. The south walls project about two feet from the main block to accommodate the bays. The northside wall has no projecting bays to mirror the south wall; there are paired windows in the first-story bay nearest to the street.

The rear wall of the main block is three bays across; all three bays contain windows at second-story level, but only one bay is supplied with a window on the first story where a frame extension is tacked onto the house. These one-story wings or extensions are of no architectural merit. One of the extensions provides an entrance facing the street on the northside of the house, flush with the rear wall of the main block.

The hip roof is covered with green rubber tile material; the hip-roofed dormers emerge from the roof slopes. The dormer windows are paired 1-over-1 sash windows. The chimney rises through the rear roof surface.

The sidewalk leading to the house passes under a frame latch gate which is joined to a post and rail fence that encloses the entire lot. During the survey, the premises were littered with materials of restoration work then in progress.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The present Saltysiak house has been associated with two medical practitioners and is the anchor of the row of suburban houses that wend their way up the slope at the north end of Parkton. Its grounds once included the 25th milestone set up about 1809 to mark a unit of distance on the old Baltimore and York Town Turnpike. The lots at this end of town were laid out in 1887, ten years after laying out the bending street that forms the southern and western boundary of this lot. (1)

The property went through various hands, but the 1918 tax ledger proves that the house is a late arrival as its Colonial revival design would suggest, being listed as "New House 26 x 30 in an amendment made to the ledger in 1922. C. Webster Hendrix was its owner, and his nearest neighbor was Lewis Tipton. (2)

Hendrix and his wife had acquired the grounds in April of 1921 from Sarah Frances Tucker, a holder of considerable town land here. (3) In 1937, Hendrix and wife sold this house they had in all likelihood built to Dr. Andrew Menares France and Annie S. France. (4) Dr. France was a general practitioner at Parkton for 45 years and served as deputy state medical examiner for 40 years. A native of Hagerstown, he had been graduated from Towson State Normal School, Johns Hopkins, and the University of Maryland School of Maryland, where he finished in 1932. Dr. France founded a boy scout troop and the Parkton Rotary Club, and was on the board of two banks. (5) In 1951, he sold this house on the York Road and resided at Mending Hill in Parkton, where he died on May 20, 1980. (6)

The third owner of the house was Dr. Leonard T. Saltysiak and his wife, who acquired title in 1951. Dr. Saltysiak is an optometrist. The house was undergoing extensive renovations in early 1980. (6)
