DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
The Codd House is a two storey house of brick, seven bays in length, one room deep, with a two bay, two storey brick wing extending to the rear (southerly) from its west end; the rear wing has, in turn, a small one storey shed roofed extension on its east side. The five westerly bays of the house comprise a typical five bay house scheme, with a door in the center bay; the two easterly bays, which include a door and a window, are said to have related to a shop, originally, a not-unexpected scheme for this house in the heart of the village. Brickwork of the main house, the two easterly bays, the rear wing and its small easterly extension, appears continuous and contemporaneous; the continuous roof structure appears to confirm the conjecture that the entire structure was built at the same time. A one storey, shed roofed porch extends along the west end; across the principal (north or street) front, a similar porch is outlined by the weathering of the brick, and the filling of beam merrises in the wall. At least the front (north) porch, and probably the west porch as well, is original, as evidenced by the unaltered long 6/9 windows extending to the floor. The common bond brick, with every sixth course headers, the windows with louvred blinds, and the exposed wood lintels, together with most original interior detailing, relate the Codd House to several other nearby buildings near the heart of Monkton, probably built just after the Civil War. The street front first storey windows in the principal bays of the house are 6/9, with long louvred blinds to match; other windows are 6/6. The elliptically-arched entrance feature, together with its hood, is of recent vintage. Original interior features include the basic plan, and much detailing. In the narrow center hall, the principal stair, rising to the second storey, has a round walnut rail supported by a massive turned walnut newel and turned balusters; scrolled step ends complete the stair decoration. The hall is flanked by a single room on either side; the wall between the room to the west and the rear wing has been removed, creating a single large room. Some architraves are beaded, but are otherwise plain, and support a similar frieze, with a small moulding at the top as a crown; others have a broad simple backband. The one original mantel is in the room east of the center hall; massive but plain pilasters support a similar frieze, with a shelf supported by a bold moulding. Second storey features are similar to first, but simpler, as expected. There are no fireplaces, and the single flues in the chimneys were intended for stoves. Roof rafters are mitred. The stone walled cellar extends under the principal bays of the house, and the rear wing, but not under the easterly two bays. Immediately west of the rear wing is a shed-roofed brick spring house, measuring but 6'-8" by 7'-4". Smaller than most remaining spring houses in the region, its size and form undoubtedly relate to the many small spring houses described in the 1798 Federal Direct Tax, most, if not all, of which have been replaced with larger structures in the 19th century.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Code House is a brick house of mid-19th century origin. This structure is on part of what was originally lot 68 which was patented to Benjamin Meredith (-1) and remained in the Meredith family until this was sold in 1849 by William F. Meredith to Samuel Miller. (-2) Samuel Miller owned a number of other pieces of property in the Village of Monkton and was the builder of Monkton hotel. The property changed hands in 1859 and in 1865 came into the possession of Thomas Keffman. (-3) In that transaction, it is noted that the property is conveyed with "all improvements and appertinances and the right to use the spring as much as needed for the family."

This house does not appear on the 1850 map, but is present on the 1877 map of Baltimore county under the name of Thomas Keffman, a saddle and harness maker. The likelihood is that the house was built by Samuel Miller prior to the sale in 1859, which is the approximate date that he built the Monkton Hotel, or shortly thereafter by the Keffmans, John or Thomas.
