J. FRANK BOWEN FARM

Port Republic

1894

Private

The J. Frank Bowen farm contains several Late Nineteenth Century and early twentieth century structures. The house is a somewhat typical cross-gable farmhouse built c. 1894. The tobacco barn on the same property is older than the house and is notable for its post-and-beam frame which exhibits dovetail mortise-and-tenon joints fixed with wooden pegs.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Mr. Ollie Bowen will be 89 years old in May, and he has spent most of his life in Port Republic. He was born in the house next to Ben I. Bowen's store, and when he was six years old, his father J. Frank Bowen built the house across the street from his present home. The oldest part of that house was built by his brother Edward c. 1912. Edward L. Bowen operated Ben I. Bowen's store during the 1920's and 1930's.

The house which J. Frank Bowen built in the 1890's was built on an existing farm. The barn on the hill west of the house was already there, as was a "tenant house" which has long since been destroyed. Ollie says that his father built the small barn in the hollow north of the house. J. Frank Bowen's house is of frame construction and is very typical with its cross-gable front facade (East) that is three bays in width with a central entrance. This same side exhibits a 1 1/2 bay porch. The main block is two stories in height and is one bay deep. A single story kitchen addition in the rear (West) gives the building an L-plan.

The symmetrically placed windows are 6/6.

The space heaters which warmed the house were serviced by an interior flue chimney on the north end of the building. A smaller chimney served the same purpose on the west end of the kitchen.

Tobacco Barn:

This is a nine room barn which has 10' tree-post sheds on the west, south, and east sides. The main portion has a post-and-beam frame which utilizes angle braces with open-face dovetail joints that are mortise-and-tenoned and held with trunnels. The members of this heavy frame exhibit vertical saw marks where in the sheds circular sawn materials were seen.

2' studding with nail holes in it suggests that clapboards originally covered the exterior walls.

Early strap hinges have been used as braces for the footing of the southwest corner posts of the shed.
