This early twentieth-century bungalow faces east onto Old Town Road. It is a one-and-a-half-story, framed and weatherboarded structure with a gable roof. A two-bay shed dormer provides light to the upper story. There is one interior brick stove flue. The three-bay facade is composed of a central doorway and flanking paired windows. The original sash are one-over-one. The windows on the upper story have been changed to six-over-six double-hung sash. A screened porch shelters the facade. The house is extended on the south gable end by a one-story, one-bay wing. Aluminum siding and louvred blinds were recently added.
