Bowen's Inn (Second)

14630 S. Solomons Island Road

Solomons, Calvert County

1918

Private

The present Bowen's Inn, the second structure to serve as an inn on this property, is one of the most well known and oldest continuously operating inns on Solomons Island. George Mortimer Bowen established the first Bowen's Inn in 1918 at the Northam House, which was constructed in 1888 and razed in 1976.(1) The second, and present, inn was constructed by Bowen in 1937 to meet the needs of tourist and vacationers coming to Solomons Island, which was a popular destination for Washington, D.C. residents in the 20th century.

Bowen's Inn consists of the three-story main block and the two-story addition connected by a single-story, wood-frame hyphen. The main block is a wood-frame structure with a rectangular footprint. Once clad in square-butt wood shingles, the main block is presently clad in vinyl siding and set on a rock-faced concrete block foundation. The building has a hip roof with wide overhanging boxed eaves and asphalt shingles. Between the second- and third-stories is an overhanging pent roof that encircles the building. The eaves of this secondary roof project further than those of the primary roof. A single interior brick chimney with a corbeled cap projects from the northwest side of the building. The two-story addition was built during the first quarter of the 20th century as a freestanding single-family dwelling. Located on the northeast portion of the lot, this addition is a wood-frame, pyramid-roof building with a complicated L-shaped footprint created by a series of additions to the northeast and southeast sides. The one-story hyphen has a side-gabled roof with enclosed pedimented gables on the side elevations. The addition and hyphen are clad in vinyl siding. This material cladding and the subsequent additions obscure the foundations. Bowen's Inn has undergone extensive renovation since 1986 and very little remains of its original character on the exterior or interior.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The second Bowen's Inn associated with this property is located on the east side of 14630 S. Solomons Island Road in Solomons, Calvert County, Maryland. Situated on a flat, grassy lot directly north of Bafford's Store (CT-990), Bowen's Inn consists of the three-story main block and the two-story addition connected by a single-story, wood-frame hyphen. The main block, built in 1937 and located on the southwest portion of the lot closest to the street, is a wood-frame structure with a rectangular footprint. Once clad in square-butt wood shingles, the main block is presently clad in vinyl siding and set on a rock-faced concrete block foundation. The building has a hip roof with wide overhanging boxed eaves and asphalt shingles. Between the second- and third-stories is an overhanging pent roof that encircles the building. The eaves of this secondary roof project further than those of the primary roof. A single interior brick chimney with a corbeled cap projects from the northwest side of the building.

The two-story addition was built during the first quarter of the 20th century as a freestanding single-family dwelling. Located on the northeast portion of the lot, this addition is a wood-frame, pyramid-roof building with a complicated L-shaped footprint created by a series of additions to the northeast and southeast sides. The one-story hyphen has a side-gabled roof with enclosed pedimented gables on the side elevations. The addition and hyphen are clad in vinyl siding. This material cladding and the subsequent additions obscure the foundations. Bowen's Inn has undergone extensive renovation since 1986 and very little remains of its original character on the exterior or interior.

SETTING

Bowen's Inn is situated on a flat, grassy parcel of land historically identified as Lot 23 on a plat of the town from 1870 by Thomas Grover. (1) This parcel, like those adjacent, is wedged between the road to the southwest, with the Patuxent River beyond, and the Narrows to the northeast. The Narrows can be accessed directly from the northeast end of the property, where there is now a boat landing and a deck. Between S. Solomons Island Road and the inn is a flat, grassy lawn (the site of the Northam House, which was the first Bowen's Inn). The lot directly adjacent to the Bowen's Inn property to the northwest is currently being used for parking and is almost entirely paved. The lot directly adjacent to the inn on the southeast side, which is separated from the inn by a paved drive, is occupied by a store, historically Bafford's Store.

EXTERIOR DESCRIPTION

The façade or southeast elevation is seven bays in width, with a single opening per bay on each story. On the first story of the southernmost bay is the recessed entry. A half-hipped roof with a boxed cornice shelters the entry. Tapered square Tuscan posts and a rock-faced concrete foundation support the roof, which is clad in asphalt shingles. The shallow steps are made of brick. The double-wide entry has fifteen-light French doors with a molded surround. The six bays to the north of the entry are pierced by single window openings, each with a 1/1-vinyl replacement sash and square-edged surrounds of vinyl. Similarly, the symmetrically pierced second and third stories have seven 1/1-vinyl replacement windows and square-edged surrounds of vinyl. A photograph dated 1986 shows the window openings originally had 6/1 wood sash and square-edged surrounds of wood. The foundation is pierced with four single-light openings that are rectangular in shape.

The northeast elevation of the building is almost completely obscured by a three-story wood fire-escape construction and the one-story hyphen. On the first story are two single-entry doors flanking a small 1/1 window. The second and third stories feature symmetrical openings with 1/1 windows flanking a single entry opening holding a replacement metal door.

The northwest elevation, which faces the parking lot, is eight bays in width. The first story has five standard 1/1 windows and a shorter 1/1 window. The first story of the southernmost bay has no openings. The second story has alternating standard and shorter 1/1 windows. A paired 1/1 window that lights the interior stair pierces the southernmost bay of the second story. The second story has three standard 1/1 windows. Moving northeast to northwest, it has four openings with alternating short and standard 1/1 windows. The southernmost bay has a standard 1/1 window. The foundation is pierced by five single-light openings.

The southwest elevation is three bays in width with very little fenestration. A pair of fifteen-light French doors pierces the first story. On the second story is a single window opening at the west end of the elevation, lighting the interior stair. On the third story are three evenly spaced windows with 1/1 replacement sash.

L-shaped in plan, the wood-frame hyphen stands one story in height. The southeast elevation has two 1/1-vinyl replacement windows and a single entry opening. The northwest elevation has a single entry. Metal ventilators pierce the enclosed pediments of the hyphen.

The two-story addition, which appears to have been constructed as a single-family dwelling, has been converted to a restaurant and bar for the inn. This building measures four bays wide and three bays deep. The southeast elevation is covered on the first story by a porch. The porch has a half-hipped roof supported by Tuscan columns. The porch, partially screened in, shelters a secondary entrance to the restaurant and bar. The entry is flanked by 1/1 windows. The second story has four equally spaced 1/1 windows. The northwest elevation of the house has a one-story shed roof addition pierced by a brick chimney. This addition has a single entry flanked by small square windows. The second story has three 1/1 windows.

The northeast elevation of the house has been extended by the construction of a two-story bay with a shed roof and single 1/1-window openings. Further, a one-story gable-roofed addition was constructed in the latter part of the 20th century. This addition, clad in aluminum, has three fixed picture windows on the southeast elevation. The northeast elevation has a sliding metal window, wide single entry, and two fixed picture windows. A louvered metal ventilator pierced the gable. A wooden deck on square posts surrounds the restaurant.

INTERIOR DESCRIPTION

The interior of the inn has been extensively renovated since its construction in 1937, and the current floor plan and most of the detailing date to this late-20th-century renovation. The building has a center hall plan with a dog-leg stair in the northwest corner of the building. The walls have been finished in drywall and the ceilings are covered with dropped acoustical tile. The floors are carpeted, although some of the original floorboards remain beneath. Interior doors are hollow plywood doors. Wood surrounds on the windows and doors are square-edged replacements. The baseboards, which are replacements, has ogee-molded caps. The main stair features a square wood newel post with recessed panels and projecting molding, square landing newels, circular starter step, and stringer brackets. Portions of the original kitchen remain, including tongue-and-groove beaded board walls, several doors and architrave moldings, and a functioning dumbwaiter.

The two-story addition was only accessible on the first floor and has been extensively renovated. No visible original features remain.

The present Bowen's Inn, the second structure to serve as an inn on this property, is one of the most well known and oldest continuously operating inns on Solomons Island. George Mortimer Bowen established the first Bowen's Inn in 1918 at the Northam House, which was constructed in 1888 and razed in 1976.(1) The second, and present, inn was constructed by Bowen in 1937 to meet the needs of tourist and vacationers coming to Solomons Island, which was a popular destination for Washington, D.C. residents in the 20th century.

HISTORY OF SOLOMONS

Named for Isaac Solomon who established a cannery by 1868, Solomons received official recognition as a community when a post office was opened in 1870. Benefiting from its deep-water location where the Patuxent River meets the Chesapeake Bay, Solomons grew into one of Calvert County's most important commercial centers. According to a report in the Calvert Gazette on November 12, 1892, "There are about one hundred houses upon the island, including some stores which do an active business in the oyster season, and three shipyards...It is chiefly occupied by oystermen and fishermen."(2)

Solomons thrived as a commercial center through the first decades of the 20th century. During the 1920s, the community was in an economic decline due to decreased oyster and fish harvests and the resulting decrease in shipbuilding. Despite the economic decline, which was further impacted by the Great Depression, the community began to attract visitors, becoming a resort area with summer boarding houses and charter fishing vessels.

As opposed to the resort community of Chesapeake Beach, Solomons remained primarily a fishing community until the seaside resort and fishing tourism industry took off during the second half of the 20th century. Vacationers from Washington, D.C., in particular, would go to Solomons to spend their days fishing, while evenings could be spent at the Evans Dancing Pavilion, built in 1919, on Solomons Island pier which later featured a water slide off of the roof. Visitors to Solomons could stay in one of a number of inns, the grandest of which was Rekar's Hotel, built in 1922, and the Locust Inn (CT-973), built in 1886.

HISTORY OF BOWEN'S INN

The property on which the present Bowen's Inn stands owned by Isaac Solomon, who leased it in 1871 to John T. Simpkins. Simpkins gained title to the property in 1884 and sold it February 1888 to Captain James W. Northam. Captain Northam, who came to Solomons from Accomac County, Virginia, improved the property by constructing a Queen Anne-style dwelling. The wood-frame house stood two stories in height with a third story hidden in the mansard roof. The widowed Northam conveyed the property in October 1918 to former oysterman George Mortimer Bowen. The purchase of the property was recounted in the Calvert Journal on March 1, 1919, "Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Bowen moved Tuesday into the house lately purchased from Captain

James W. Northam.”(3)

Recognizing the property's potential within the resort community of Solomons, Bowen rehabilitated the circa 1888 dwelling for use as an inn. Bowen's Inn became "one of the favorite fishing headquarters for many congressional and sports figures out of Washington, D.C. Prominent among them was Sam Rayburn, longtime Speaker of the House of Representatives. The inn enjoyed a fine reputation for its good food, and played host to Arthur Godfrey, John F. Kennedy, Harry Truman, and many state governors and officials.”(4) Bowen also established "a shoe repairing shop in his yard on the creek shore, and Mr. Mitchell, of St. Mary's County, is equipped to do all kinds of show repairing.”(5)

The success and growth of the inn is explained in Solomons Island and Vicinity: An Illustrated History and Walking Tour,

Edgar Bowen, Mortimer's son, ran waterfowl hunting trips from here on the Patuxent River and Chesapeake Bay. The "beer garden," or outside bar, was a first in Solomons. It was built in 1927 as an annex to the original inn, then converted in the 1930s.(6)

In 1937, the popularity of the inn prompted the constructed of the present hotel facility that stands three stories in height and seven bays wide. The modern inn was "added immediately behind the old house.”(7)

During World War II, rooms were rented to accommodate the wives of naval personnel stationed in the area. In 1951, forty rooms were available, at a cost of three to four dollars a night.(8)

After the death of Bowen, the property was bequeathed to Althea Bowen McKenney in 1972. The property continued to operate as an inn, with the construction of a restaurant and bar. During this period, the circa 1888 dwelling constructed by Northam was razed. In 1986, the Bowen family sold the inn after sixty-eight years of ownership. Anthony M. Constantino and Joan M. Simmons purchased property. During the four-year tenure of the Simmons family, Bowen's Inn was extensively renovated and modernized. Bowen's Inn, with a history that began in 1918, continues to operate on Solomons Island under the proprietorship of Joan Simmons.

This substantial three-story hotel building is set back from Solomons Island Road and faces south toward Solomons Island. It is a big framed and wood-shingled structure with a mansard roof that also reads as kind of a four-sided monitor dormer with its own hipped roof. The structure has a decoratively molded concrete-block foundation. The windows are glazed with six-over-one-double-hung sash. The details around the entrance at the southwest corner of the building and at the rooflines are executed in the Colonial Revival style. This structure dates from the early twentieth century.
