Rectory, St. Paul's Parish
Hillsboro
Private

Circa 1860

Across the street from St. Paul's Church, Hillsboro, stands a good late 19th Century dwelling which was at one time the rectory for the Church. It is a typical five-bay house, two-stories tall covered with aluminum siding. The original walls are said to be built of brick. From its trim, it appears to date from the second half of the 19th Century.

The Rectory of St. Paul's Parish in Hillsboro is located on the north side of the street opposite the National Register landmark St. Paul's Parish Church. The Rectory has been sold from the church and is currently a private residence.

The structure is two storys of brick covered with aluminum siding. The five bay main facade has a central doorway with a round arch paneled door, four pane transom, and three pane sidelights with ogee panels below. There is a one bay, one story entrance porch with turned columns supporting a gable roof. 6/6 pane sash windows are in the other bays on the main facade and have green louvered shutters. A three bay ell wing exists on the west rear side and has a projecting porch. The gable roof is tin covered and there are chimney stacks at both ends and in the ell.
