Ober Farmhouse

Third Quarter 19th Century

The Ober house appears to have been constructed after the middle of the 19th Century on the plan of a townhouse. In form, it appears Greek Revival, but the octagonal tower on the corner is clearly a later addition and is an unsuccessful attempt to make a Queen Anne house from an earlier dwelling.

The Ober Farmhouse is located on the south side of Maryland Route 480, one-half mile west of River Road, east of Ridgely, Caroline County. The house is a late nineteenth century structure with an interesting design.

The farmhouse is a two story, three bay gable facade structure with a three story tower at its southwest corner. The structure is frame on a brick foundation and is presently covered in aluminum siding. On the west side of the main section is a one story modern addition. The main section has a rectangular plan with the tower to one side and a small kitchen projection on the southeast corner. The main facade (north elevation) of the main section has a side entrance plan with three bays on the first story, two on the second, and a centrally placed attic window. The windows have molded wood frames and 2/2 pane sash. The entrance has a plain door frame and a modillion cornice. The staircase in the entrance hallway has Victorian style trim. The tower is octagonal with a peaked eight-sided hipped roof and windows on each side of the third story. The second story has four windows and the main story has two windows and an entrance.
