DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Federalsburg Railroad Station is located on the north side of the railroad tracks in Federalsburg. The station is late nineteenth century Victorian style structure similar in design to other stations in the region.

The Station is one story with a hipped roof that flares out to overhang on all four sides. The overhang is supported by ornamental arched brackets. The body of the station has a clapboard lower section and the upper section is shingled. The north and south facades have entrances in the outer bays. The south facade has a central projection for the stationmaster. The east and west ends have large double windows with sections of 6/6 horizontal pane sash. The unused station is presently in a deteriorating state.
