DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Old "Peoples Bank" is presently occupied by the law firm of Kent, Ogletree and Thornton in which they maintain their offices. It is located across Market Street from the courthouse and has a short facade north. The three by five bay building is one story tall and constructed completely of rough cut blocks of sandstone on a granite foundation. Its facade is composed of three section divided by pilaster like towers which have broad bases and capitals which extend above the wall and roof and terminate in a pyramid. At the base of the capital is a band of egg and dat molding and from the bottom of the pyramid are geometrical epaulettes, reminiscent of art deco design. In the recessed portion of the frieze there are alternating circles and flutes on the smooth surface. Above the central bay the frieze is pedimental. Flanking the central entrance are two windows with 8/1 sash above which is a lintel bearing the original name Peoples National, above which is a semicircular arch with multipane sash. Its arch and the lintel below are made of smooth finished sandstone and they have keystones, like the transom over the entrance. Beneath the above mentioned transom is a wood Ionic architrave with double entrance doors. The doors have two glass panels above raised panels. Around the styles and rails are studs in imitation of early Gothic doors.

Atop the shallow "A" roof is a lantern with brackets between the small clerestory windows.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Old "Peoples Bank" is an extraordinary structure with more sophistication than most of the buildings in Denton. It is unlike any other banking structures on the Eastern Shore, although the material is like that employed in the 1913 Sudlersville Bank, Queen Anne's County. The building represents a good adaptive use for a commercial structure which has seen all of its active life for which it was intended.
