1880

The Reformed Church on Central Avenue, Ridgely, is an interesting frame building with gable entrance between two square towers. In concept it appears to be Romanesque, but in detail it is Gothic. It is one of the more ambitious Church structures built in Caroline County.

St. Paul's was organized in 1878 and the Church constructed in 1880 under the Pastorate of Rev. J. K. Hannabery, the first minister to reside in the new town of Ridgely. The establishment of the Church in Ridgely induced members of the faith to move to Caroline from Pennsylvania. (Ridgely Centennial, 1967)

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Ridgely Reformed Church is located at 212 Central Avenue in Ridgely, Caroline County. The building once serviced the St. Paul's Evangelical Reformed parish, but is presently unused and seemingly unkept.

The structure was built in 1880 according to the corner stone and its design has a double tower main facade and a high foundation wall on the main body of the church. The church is frame and clapboard, but the high foundation wall is a cement stucco over brick and scored to resemble ashlar masonry. The main facade (west elevation) has double square towers with the entrance between them. Both towers have a tall main section with a long and thin dentil cornice and thin 4/4 pane lancet windows and a shorter middle section with lancet ventilator windows. At the corners are fluted pilaster strips with bracket capitals. The north tower has a four sided flared roof and the south tower has a third section of reduced proportions but with lancet ventilator windows and a hipped roof. The center section with the entrance has a ornamented double doorway with a shed roof between the towers, and a double gable above, with a pointed arch window in the lower gable. The sides of the main section are three bays with round arch 4/4 pane windows, and the sides of the towers also have the round arch windows. The east elevation has several additions built on to it for service rooms, an exterior end brick chimney stack, and a three pane gable window.
