MOUNT LOFTY, DANIEL ROOP HOUSE

1857

~~early 19th century~~

Uniontown vicinity

private

Mount Lofty is a Federal style farmhouse built during the early 19th century. It has the regional L-shaped plan with a two-story, five-bay by two-bay main section. The main facade has a Flemish bond brickwork and is symmetrically arranged. A unique feature of the house is the retention of the original bakeoven and dryhouse in an addition on the west gable end outside the kitchen entrance. The interior of the house has been remodeled during the late 19th century and has grained doors and period moldings.

SUMMARY:

Mount Lofty is a Federal-style brick farmhouse built during the early 19th century. It has the regional L-shaped plan with a two-story, five-bay by two-bay main section. The main facade has Flemish-bond brickwork and is symmetrically arranged. A unique feature of the house is on the west gable end where an original brick bake and food drying compartment are located outside the kitchen entrance. The interior of the house has been remodeled during the late 19th century and has grained doors and period moldings.

DESCRIPTION:

Mount Lofty is located on the north side of Jasontown Road, approximately 1.1 miles east of Uniontown Road, east of Uniontown. The property is part of a farmstead with rolling topography. The house is sited into a slight slope so that the east gable end has a full basement story. The main facade faces south west.

The house is a two-story, five-bay by two-bay house built in a L-shape. It is constructed of brick and the main facade is laid in Flemish-bond. The main facade has a central entrance with a one-story, one-bay porch. The porch is supported by columns and has a dentil cornice. The first story has nine-over-six pane sash windows and flat-arch brick lintels. There is a molded brick watertable under the first story windows. There is a molded brick cornice under the gable roof. The roof is covered in sheet metal. At both gable ends are interior end brick chimneys with a corbelled caps.

The east gable end has an excavated foundation level with an entrance into the basement. This entrance is protected by a stone retaining wall projectings out from the front of the building. This level of the house is constructed of brick except for a portion of the foundation at the rear which is in stone and has a catslide roof over it. There are three nine-over-six windows on the first story, three six-over-six sash windows on the second story (with the window on the second story under the catslide roof located in an asymmetrical fashion), and a small four-pane window in the garrett.

The west gable end of the main block of the house has a modern entrance with a one-story, one-bay gable roof. To the south side of the entrance is a nine-over-six window. The wing projects back on this side and contains a kitchen. The kitchen entrance has a porch that contains a brick oven and drying compartment. The bake oven is enclosed in a gable roof structure on a stone foundation. On the south side of this structure, there is an opening where one can view the rear of the rat-tail style bake oven. Attached to the bake oven is a compartment of drying racks that included two vertical rows of racks with five long wooden drawers in each row. Also on the property is a brick and board and batten smoke house, a chicken house, and a barn.
