Present Use - private residence

Summary paragraph:

The two-and-a-half story, four bay by two bay bank house has been altered by the application of aluminum siding and a cinder block enclosure on the south facade basement level.

Description

House (1800-1805/1830-1850)

The main block of the Bortner House is 2-1/2 stories, two bays by two bays with two-over-two windows on all elevations. The mid-nineteenth century addition is a 2-1/2 story structure, two bays by two bays attached to the main block's west elevation. The house is sheathed in aluminum siding on the south facade and asphalt shingles on the gable ends. The main block is most likely a log structure.

The metal gable roof has an interior brick chimney on the east gable end and a central brick chimney which was probably added during the construction of the addition. An open porch traverses the south facade supported by a cinder block wall that also encloses the south facade basement level. A one story shed addition was erected across the north elevation.

Contributing Resources: 1

8. Significance

Summary paragraph:

The Bortner House is representative of an early nineteenth century log structure that is prevalent in the project area. The addition to the west elevation is a rural vernacular style which served as an enlargement for the existing log house.

History:

Located in a clearing at the end of a farm lane that branches from Grove's Mill Road, the Bortner House is one of many log structures built during the early nineteenth century that appear throughout Carroll County and the project area.

Evaluation:

Constructed circa 1800-1805 with a mid-nineteenth century addition, the Bortner House is not eligible for the National Register of Historic Places. The property is not eligible under Criterion A; no significant events historically or agriculturally have been determined to be associated with the property. The property is not eligible under Criterion B; no persons significant in local, state or national history have been determined to be associated with the property. The property is not eligible under Criterion C; though the main block is a log structure and the house does retain its original form, there are more significant examples of this type of structure within the project area that have greater integrity and extant original fabric.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The house is located in a clearing in the woods at the end of a long dirt road which winds off to the north of Maryland Route 27. Its principal facade faces south, and it is 2 1/2 stories high and built into a bank. Above its basement, now faced with cinder block, a one-story porch extends along the main floor and is supported by new decorative iron posts.

There are two doorways on the main floor, one in the east end and one in the second bay from the west. There are three 2/2 windows on the main floor, and four on the second floor. The principal facade has an irregular fenestration pattern, with the western half less regular than the eastern end. This may be due to the addition of one section of the house to an earlier part. This addition is also suggested by the location of two brick chimneys, one an interior east end chimney and the other slightly east of center.

The east and west gable ends are both two bays deep, and on the north side of the house is a two story, one bay deep shed roofed addition. Probably constructed of log or stone, the house sheathed with white aluminum siding on its main (south) facade, and with grey/green asphalt shingles on both gable ends.

This is probably the C. Bortner house shown at approximately this location on an 1862 Martenet atlas of Carroll County.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The house is of interest for its possible early date and construction, as indicated by the unusual fenestration and location of its two chimneys, which suggests that the house was built in at least two sections.
