

Pennington-Collins Farm
CE-1001
Middle Neck Near Warwick
Private

C. 1860-1870

The Pennington-Collins farmhouse is another example of the third quarter of the 19th century 2½ story three bay by one room frame house with rear kitchen wing. In this instance, however, the shorter two story two bay by one room kitchen wing appears to have preceeded the front part of the house. Seams in foundation stone and weatherboards are exterior evidence while an exposed corner sway brace in the kitchen-dining room hall appears to be a framing member that was left to support an existing structure when the door was cut through to a new dining room.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Pennington-Collins House c. 1870 is a 2½ story frame I-House on the north side of Middle Neck Road. The house faces south with the main gable running east/west.

The center hall single pile rests on a full field-stone foundation and is sheathed with common weather-boards. A steeply pitched roof is covered with seamed tin. A 2½ bay by one room section extends from the main block at the same height. A slightly shorter two bay by one room frame kitchen wing is attached to the previous extension.

The south (main) facade is slightly different from most I-House elevations. Double 4/4 sash windows with molded lintels flank a six panel front door with transom light. The surrounds have a slight reeding. Three sets of double sash illuminate the second floor and an arched double sash lights the cross gable. The eaves are naturally extended with slightly decorated bargeboards. A shed porch covers the first floor and is supported by turned posts with simple corner brackets.

The east and west end are basically the same with a single 6/6 on each floor and an arched sash that lights the attic. Interior brick stove stacks flank the main house and flank the center hall. The detailing on the rear wing of the main block remains the same. The shorter kitchen wing has basically the same details with a brick stove stack rising out of the gable end. The gable end is plain except for a 2/2 attic light. A seam does appear in foundation brick which does point to a separate possibly slightly later building date for the rear section. (OR EARLIER)

The interior has retained most of its late 19th century grained woodwork. The stair rises with a square newel with spherical finial. The balusters are turned. Double paneled parlor doors are complete with oak graining and late 19th century hardware. The mantels still remain with reeded supports under a molded mantel shelf and frieze. The dining room is similarly decorated. (KITCHEN -

EXPOSED SWAY BRACE FROM KITCHEN TO DINING ROOM - V PART. A few 19th century farm structures include medium sized barns, dairy, wagon sheds, chicken coops and single privy. The barns are on a perpendicular axis with the main house.
