DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The James M. Evans house c. 1850 is a two story three bay by three bay rectangular weatherboard frame house on Spring Hill Road, a mile south of Ridge Road. The house stands on a hill that overlooks the adjacent River Valley. The house faces east with the main gable running east/west since the gable end serves as the main facade.

The house is supported by a raised granite and fieldstone foundation since the site slopes eastward. The medium sloped slate roof has a bracketed eave on the main elevation. The sides of the house have a boxed cornice.

The three bay front elevation is symmetrically arranged with a central arched door and flanking 6/6 sash windows with plain surrounds. The transom is arched. The second floor is lighted by three identical sash. Pintels do remain on each window opening. The attic space is illuminated by a four pane round window. A shed roof porch does cover the first floor and square posts with scrolled brackets support the porch roof.

The north and south sides of the main block are basically the same with three 6/6 sash on each floor. A centrally located stuccoed brick stove stack rises out of the house.

The west (back) elevation of the main house is primarily covered with a shorter two story two bay by one room frame kitchen addition. An interior brick stack rises out of the gable end with an exposed first floor fire wall. The north and south sides have an identical placement of doors and windows. A single door and window occupy the first floor openings and two 6/6 sash light the second floor. A shed roof porch covers the first floor of the north side. A four pane attic light does pierce the west wall of the main block above the kitchen addition.

The interior of the main house consists of a central hall with large room on either side. Mid to late 19th Century woodwork is found throughout. The south parlor mantel has simple pilasters which support a plain frieze and thick shelf with bed molding. The door and window surrounds have a mid 19th Century molding profile. The ceilings reach approximately eight to ten feet. The rest of the house was not surveyed.

SPECIFIC DATES

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Neo-classical architecture and its influence even found its way to the relatively isolated northern hills of Cecil County. James M. Evans is credited with building this bracketed "Temple oriented" residence on a hill overlooking a branch of the Octorara Creek. The area as a whole is conservative architecturally and this house provides a contrast to the more traditional stone and log buildings found nearby. The use of the exposed fire wall of the kitchen stack is also an interesting element of this house.
