DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Cameron-Webb House c. 1850 is a two story three bay by one room house with rear kitchen ell on Harrington Road $\frac{1}{2}$ mile southwest of Farmington. The house faces east with the main gable running north/south.

The front block rests on a full fieldstone foundation while the entire house is covered with asbestos shingle. The medium sloped corrugated tin roof has extended eaves that are left open.

The main elevation is three bays across with a central entrance and flanking 2/2 sash windows. The front door is a replacement. The second floor is lighted by three 2/2 sash that are all with the first floor openings. A shed roof front porch covers the first floor and extends around to the south side. The turned support posts have a small sawn decorative brackets.

The south gable end has two 2/2 sash on each floor and four pane attic lights. The south side of the kitchen ell is two bays across with a side entrance off the shed roof enclosed porch. The shed enclosure extends to also cover the single story gable end shed kitchen addition. The second floor of the kitchen wing is lighted by two 6/6 sash windows. Access to the cellar is gained through the porch floor. The earlier weatherboard is exposed under the porch. A simple boxed cornice covers the rafter ends.

The west end is primarily covered with a story and a half shed addition. Two windows light the first floor, one 2/2 sash and one 6/6 window. Two four pane attic lights flank the interior end brick chimney. A plain bargeboard covers the gable end.

The north gable end is similarly detailed with 4/4 sash flanking the interior end brick stack. The kitchen wing is the same as the rest of the kitchen wing with another entrance through the kitchen shed addition.

The main block interior consists of two rooms separated by a central stair that was originally enclosed and partially opened with a early 20th century handrail and stick balustrade.

The mantel is located on the north wall. The fireplace surround has a thumb and astragal backband with beaded inside corner. The frieze is plain and mantel shelf is a thick board. The same surround molding is found around an interior door. The window surrounds are a late 19th century molding that was probably altered when the windows were added. A large double door opening allows access to the previous kitchen with a large fireplace with simple shelf across the end wall. An adjacent windower stair is enclosed with beaded board partitions and doors.

The second floor is fairly plain with similar trim. An enclosed winder stair rises to the attic in the northeast bedroom.

Outbuildings include a large timber frame barn with narrow vertical board siding which rests on a fieldstone foundation. Wagon sheds, a meat house and a dairy are sited nearby.
