DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
Rodgers Tavern is located in Perryville, Maryland, on the north side of West Main Street (Maryland Route 7) which parallels and is south of U. S. Route 40. Rodgers Tavern is a mid-eighteenth-century, two-story stone structure. The south facade is laid in regular stone blocks whereas the other three sides are irregular. Its basement is at ground level on south side only. The main floor is accessible by a set of steps located on the east side of a porch extending across the south facade. The 1970 appearance dates from its restoration about 1960. The facade of the building has five openings on each story, the center one being an entrance door to the basement and first story, and the third blocked up. The main door is a pair of separate doors, which date from the 1880's when the Pennsylvania Railroad made this a double house. Windows on the first and second stories have six over six sash and wide frames. The east and west gables have two windows at each level. The cornice of the low-pitched "A" roof continues on all sides, making pent eaves on the gables. Two, four over four sash windows flank the chimney which is built of brick above the ridge of the roof. Off the west half of the north facade an earlier one-story wing may be traced. When the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities acquired the property in 1956, a two-story wing had been built across the entire north facade. It has since been demolished. The interior of the house was originally divided into a "great room" and parlor in the south half, and two small rooms with a stair hall between in the north half. All rooms have corner fireplaces. In the 1880's the house was divided into two halves, east and west, the original stair was replaced by two steep enclosed stairs and the "great room" made equal in size to the southeast parlor. The southeast parlor is an original room, retaining its raised panel chimney-breast, bold cornice, three-piece chair rail and original windows and door trim. Apparently, it was the most elaborate of all the rooms. In the parlor fireplace an iron fireback bears the date "1771". Other rooms retain some original window and door trim and chair rail. On the second story, only, the northwest room and the southeast room have corner fireplaces, the latter retaining its original trim (without mantel shelf). These rooms were plainer than those of the first story. Tradition says that General Washington used the northeast bedroom; Lafayette used the southwest room. Most of the attic is sheathed with wide boards, covered with many coats of whitewash.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Rodgers Tavern is of national importance due to the frequent visits of George Washington between the years 1775-1798.

Colonel John Rodgers (1728-1791), the owner during most of Washington's visits, was the progenitor of the Rodgers family which distinguished itself in the formation and growth of the United States Navy. Also the visits of distinguished persons, namely Martha Washington, Lafayette, Rochambeau and others, make the hostelry of prime importance, and one of the remaining hostelries used by eighteenth and nineteenth century travelers.

Prior to John Rodgers' purchase of the tavern in 1780, it was operated by William Stevenson. George Washington's diary of May 7, 1775 mentions having "dined at Rogers and lodged at Stevenson's". John Rodgers already had established a tavern in Havre de Grace and a ferry across the Susquehanna River between Havre de Grace and the spot where Stevenson operated his tavern. George Washington's next stop was a year after John Rodgers had bought "Mr. Stevenson's Tavern". Rodgers at that time was operating two taverns and the ferry between. After Rodgers' death in 1791 his widow operated the taverns. Between 1775 and 1798, George Washington mentions having stopped at the Susquehanna River over thirty times, to dine or lodge.

Commodore John Rodgers (1772-1839), Colonel Rodgers oldest son, distinguished himself in the War of 1812. His son, George Washington Rodgers, became a Commodore in the Navy.

In 1956, the Pennsylvania Railroad deeded the tavern to the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities. Since that time, the Friends of Rodgers Tavern and the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities have raised enough funds to restore the exterior of the building and guaranty its preservation. Their objective is to completely restore the building and to open it to the public as a Museum, with one room dedicated to Washington memorabilia.

The two story stone Rogers Tavern was an important stopping place on the east bank of the Susquehanna River, for travelers who had to wait for the ferry service which made the river crossing. The tavern was purchased by John Rogers in 1780. It had been operated by William Stephenson, possibly as early as 1745. Rogers' son was Commodore John Rodgers (1771-1838) who won renown in the War of 1812 as a naval hero and was Secretary of the Navy in 1823.

The tavern was host to George Washington who lodged here May 6, 1775. Washington records other stops on April 15, 1795 and April 30, 1795. Again in September 8, 1795 traveling from Mt. Vernon to Philadelphia, Washington's diary records that he "dined at Mrs. Rogers' Susesquehanna ..." John Rodgers had died in 1791 and the place was carred on by his widow.

Now owned by the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities and is being restored by the "Friend of Rogers Tavern."

The taproom was located in the basement where great stone arches in the corners support the fireplaces and chimneys above. A colonnade across the front of the basement supports a white pilliared porch across the front of the building. There is a center door, flanked by two bays of windows.

Rodger's Tavern is a mid-eighteenth-century stone building which hosted many well known travelers, among them ~~being~~ ^{Al} George Washington. It is two-stories high and the basement forms another ~~another~~ story on the south facade. The double central doors of the first floor are reached by ^{from} a one-story porch. It is five bays long on the south and three bays long on the north. It is two bays deep and the chimneys are within the gables, servicing corner fireplaces. The south facade has a stepped water table; and a plain wood cornice encircles the house, forming pent eaves on the gables. There are two four-pane casement windows in the ~~attic~~ ^{attic} of each gable.

The Tavern is presently being restored by the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities.
