Description of Property and Justification: (Please attach map and photo)

The Elkton Supply Company at 202 W. Main Street consists of a 2.89 acre parcel at the southwest corner of Main Street and Bridge Street (MD 213). Several buildings occupy the parcel, but the small nineteenth-century brick dwelling inventoried in the Maryland Inventory of Historic Places in 1973 is longer extant. Likewise the adjacent properties the Bledsoe House (CE-260) at 204 W. Main Street and the Brick House (CE-1543) at 200 W. Main Street are no longer extant.

The current buildings have the general appearance of vernacular commercial structures exhibiting modest use of materials. The main building faces west towards Bridge Street, with a paved parking area between the building and the street. The building is composed of multiple building phases. The southern, two-story section of the façade has vertical aluminum siding capped by a red parapet. This section has a projecting steel-framed glazed entrance accessed via poured concrete steps and a ramp. The rest of the façade is devoid of openings, including the three bay, one-story, north section which has enclosed bays.

The red capped parapet continues from the east-facing façade along the north elevation adjoining Main Street. Iron fencing and corrugated aluminum shed awnings provide protected outdoor storage. The western section of the north elevation is two stories tall, with five evenly-spaced sash windows on the second floor and a hipped roof. This is the approximate location of the two-story Elkton Supply Company building documented in 1973, but the current fenestration pattern and roof type are too different from what was photographed in 1973 to suggest that is the same structure. If elements remain, they are so highly altered that they do not bear any resemblance to the original structure.

The west elevation reveals a less obscured view of the hipped roof section of the building further decreasing the retention of historic fabric. The west elevation features a glass-enclosed, metal-framed projecting secondary entrance. The south elevation reveals that the two-story façade parapet slopes to a one-story height at the west elevation.

Large, aluminum-walled, gabled-roofed buildings are secondary structures on the property.

A massive, multi-story stone retaining wall extends along Bridge Street, then turns to the west, holding the ground upon which the supply company buildings stand and providing a two-story-plus stone wall at the lower, southern end of the property.

This retaining wall is a relic of the site's long industrial history, as illustrated by historic maps and research. R.L. Barnes' map of Elkton (1858) shows three houses along Main Street (Jno Gallagher, R. D. Jamar, and Est. of W. Hollingsworth) and J.C. Howard Lumber Yard along the west side of Bridge Street. At the terminus of what is now Howard Street and north of the Big Elk Creek. The map shows the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore Railroad (P.W. & B. R. R. Co.) which was established in the 1830s and is now the Northeast corridor trunk line connecting Washington, DC and Boston. In the 1870s, Elkton businessmen began advocating for additional rail connections, and in 1880, the Elkton and Middletown (Delaware) Railroad Company was chartered, with the intent to connect the twelve miles between the two towns. One of the first commissioners was David Scott, who traded in grain and other commodities as D. Scott and Co., opening a bone dust factory in August 1875 at the foot of Bridge Street at Howard's Wharf (1). David Scott's son Frank R. Scott took over the fertilizer business and incorporated the Scott Fertilizer Company of Elkton in 1887. The company should not be confused with Scotts Seed Company of MiracleGro fame; that company was founded in Ohio in 1868 by Orlando M. Scott (2). Finally in 1894, the Elkton and Middletown Railroad began acquiring land to build its line through Elkton. The Plat is recorded in Cecil County Plats Land Records Liber TTG # 5, folio 554, and shows the right-of-way leading through the upper part of the Scott Fertilizer Company property. The railroad opened in 1895 and appears on the 1897 Sanborn map, with a wood trestle extending over the low ground near Big Elk Creek. The Elkton and Middletown Rail Road ended up only serving Elkton industries, and another siding was built to Singerly's Pulp Mill, located directly west of the Scott Fertilizer Company (Liber J.T.G #8, folio 6).

In 1882, William M. Singerly, owner of the Providence Paper Mills in northern Cecil County, built extensive brick Pulp Works in Elkton on the former site of the J. C. Howard Lumber Yard on the shore of Big Elk Creek. It is shown on the 1885 Sanborn as the Elkton Pulp Mill. By 1888, the pulp works employed 120 men and produced 25,000 pounds of pulp a day, operating both night and day (3). In 1899, the Kenmore Paper Company purchased the mill, then called Radnor Pulp Mill, and by 1931 the owners were the Jessup & Moore Paper Company (4). The pulp mill, the fertilizer works, the railroad, and the truss bridge over Big Elk Creek are prominently shown in Fowler and Kelly bird's eye view illustration of Elkton (1907).

In 1916, the Elkton and Middletown Railroad was acquired by the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad (5). Frank R. Scott died in 1917, and a fire destroyed the lower portion of the Elkton Fertilizer Works. The Elkton Supply Company was organized at the site in 1924 and provided lumber, feed, and fertilizer. Parts of extant buildings date from the mid-twentieth century, although consolidation of several parcels occurred in 1983 forming the current boundaries which include Parcels 239, 344, 345, and 1640 (Liber 94, folio 686-87).

The Elkton Supply Company is not eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places. It does not retain the integrity to convey its role in Elkton's industrial history and is not eligible under Criterion A. The Elkton Supply Company is not closely associated with persons significant in our shared history, and is not eligible under Criterion B. The Elkton Supply Company, primarily consisting of buildings constructed in the last fifty years does not convey architectural or engineering significance. The retaining wall is a relic of the railroad and industrial past, but as a single element does not convey the character-defining features of a small industrial railroad. The Elkton Supply Company is therefore not eligible under Criterion C. The Elkton Supply Company was not evaluated under Criterion D as part of this assessment.
