DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The fifth house south of Second Street on the east side of Charles Street is a twentieth century frame structure covered with tan ersatz brick. Along the first story of the facade is a hip roof porch which has been enclosed and now possesses four 1/1 sash windows and a center door. The porch is covered with another type of asphalt siding. On the second story facade are two 1/1 sash windows. Each gable has a window on both storys. The 'A' roof is covered with green asphalt and has no overhang at the eaves.

Behind the main body of the house is a two story wing with leanto on the south side.

Between this house and the south neighbor is a privet hedge. On the north is a picket fence.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The building is of little value architecturally. Its presence does maintain the continuity of the house forms along Charles Street.

This house benefits from the narrow vacant lot to the south. It has been the site of housing for working men for about a hundred years and is now owned by Alvin T. and Emma. V. Jones.
