DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Thomas-Holiday House was built in the late 1700's in the Colonial style. The house was constructed of fieldstone with large stone quoins in the corners. This building is three bays long by two deep and is two storeys in height. The gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles, but originally had wood shingles. Enclosing the eaves is a box cornice with crown moulding. In each gable wall is a brick chimney, with the larger being in the south gable. The house has a one storey porch that goes across the facade and down the south gable wall. The facade has a side bay entrance which opens to a small stair hall. The stairs are open string with simple bracket on the step ends. The newel has been replaced but the handrail is original. The stair railing is very plain. Within the hall is some plain chairrail. The doors have architrave around them with stops at the floor level. The front door is very wide and is paneled. The door has raised paneling in the reveal.

To the south of the entrance hall is a sitting room that also has chairrail like the hall, but it is not original. The fireplace has a very nice Federal period mantel with reeded columns framing the opening and reeded insets that decorate the freize. The mantel shelf is supported by stepped molding. Behind the sitting room is a dining room which is being worked on. The kitchen had a corner fireplace which is now covered over (has a corbeled support in the basement). The cellar door is also raised panel and identical to the entrance door.

The second floor was not open for viewing. The window sash in the Thomas-Holiday House are 9/6 on the first floor and 6/6 on the second storey. The frames are pegged with the exception of several on the first floor that have been replaced.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Thomas-Holliday House was built about 1785-1795 and has some excellent interior detail. The house perhaps served as a dwelling for a nearby tavern's owner. The house overlooks the old Susquehanna Canal and the Susquehanna River. There were several outbuilding connected with the property which have been demolished. This house could be included in a National Register nomination of the Susquehanna Canal. The property was owned at one time by Philip Thomas who owned Mt. ~~Ararat~~ south of Port Deposit.
