Doordan Frame House

c. 1875

The Doordan Frame House is ^{A 2 STORY} well shaped center hall plan frame with a fishscale shingled mansard roof. It is an uncommon form for the county and could have been built as a seasonal residence when this shore area was developed for summer vacationers in the late 19th century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Doordan House c. 1870 is a 2 story frame dwelling on Hances Point Road a $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south of the fork from Route 272. The house faces east with the main axis going north/south.

The Doordan House consists of two offset rectangles, the northern block set to the east five more feet than the southern block. These two sections are supported by an uncoursed stone foundation and covered with a manard roof. The northern block is 2 bays across by one room deep and the southern rectangle, 3 bays across by one room deep. A 1 story porch fills the front offset. A shed kitchen extends to the west of the southern section. The house has a weatherboard sheathing with beaded end boards which terminate the weatherboards. The wooden roof shingles have a fishscale design. Two chimneys rise out of each end wall and only provide for individual stove stacks.

The windows are symmetrically placed and have brick molding surrounds and 1/1 sash windows. There are small gabled dormers on the main facade with 1/1 sash windows. The double late 19th century front door is located in the third bay from the south.

The entrance leads into the center hall with a room to each side. The interior detailing is basically plain with projecting fireplaces. The late 19th century mantels are small with plain pilasters and frieze and heavy mantel shelf. The shelf is supported by brackets. Small closets are found on the sides of the projecting block. Four panel doors with porcelain door knobs remain.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Doordan Frame House is not particularly significant outside it being an example of a small 19th century dwelling with a mansard roof and a few other late 19th century details. The house has remained basically the same with a few remodelings. It remains as one of a few that have survived in this general area.
