DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Harris House c. 1877-1900 is a 2½ story frame I-House located on the road from Oakwood Crossroads to Old Conowingo. The house is just north of the main Oakwood intersection. The house has a north/south axis with the main facade having a western exposure.

The main block is 3 bays across by 2 deep. A single story shed roof addition extends off the eastern (back) side of the main block. A single story shed roof front porch is attached to the main facade.

The entire structure rests on an uncoursed stone foundation. The structure is sheathed with weatherboard siding and is capped with a steeply sloped tin roof.

The fenestration is symmetrical. 2/2 sash are found throughout with plain surrounds. The central bay is an entrance with a late 19th century paneled door with arched moldings on the top panels. The Victorian porch has turned supports and cut-out brackets.

The north gable end is 2 bays deep with two 2/2 attic windows that flank the gable end stretcher bond chimney stack. Between the first floor windows is a small gabled entrance to the cellar. It rests on fieldstone and is sheathed with weatherboards and covered with tin. The eaves were left open.

The south gable end is very similar in detail although without the basement entrance.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Harris House is another example of the ubiquitous late 19th century I-House found in this area and throughout the country. The house does have a gable exterior <sup>BASEMENT</sup> entry which is found on a number of houses of similar and earlier date. The house is one of 4 structures left at the Oakwood Crossroads. In the early 20th century the area was known as "Mexico" and largely temporary workers' shacks for employees at the Conowingo Dam. Located on the southeast corner <sup>OF THE CROSSROADS</sup> is a brick and <sup>CONCRETE</sup> block theater that was undoubtedly built in the early 20th century and the main attraction, for this rural and fairly isolated area.
