

Some mid 19th century subdivision of larger older farms undoubtedly allowed people like the builder of the Hessey House to operate a farm in the area. George W. Hessey was the owner of this farm in 1877 and may have been responsible for its construction. The farmhouse is a typical mid 19th century two story center hall single pile frame house type.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Hessey House is a 2 story 5 bay by 1 room frame house c. 1850 on Grove Neck Road and west of Earleville, Md. The main facade has an eastern exposure and the main gable runs north/south.

The 5 bay main block has a slightly lower 2 story 2 bay kitchen wing of similar appearance on its north end. The entire structure rests on a fieldstone foundation and is covered with aluminum siding over weatherboard. The lowly pitched roof is covered with tin and two stuccoed stacks rise out of the main block. One is centrally located, the other in the north end.

The east facade is symmetrically oriented with a central entrance. The door is flanked by three light sidelights with panel below and a three light transom is found overhead. The 2/2 sash windows have plain surrounds and louvered aluminum shutters. A heavy boxed cornice stretches across and extends slightly beyond the end walls.

The south end wall is plain and the west (back) wall typically asymmetrical. The detailing remains the same.

The north end of the main block is covered with the two story kitchen wing. It too has been similarly covered with aluminum. A few 6/6 sash remain along with a weatherboard single story shed off the north end. It has a board door and 6/6 sash in the east side.

The interior has survived with most of its mid 19th century woodwork and room partitions. The heavily turned newel post to the central stair supports a oval handrail and turned balusters. The 4 panel doors have heavy ogee molded insets. The south parlor mantel is not unusual with its simple pilasters, plain frieze, and thick shelf. Paneled cupboard doors are found to the west side of the projecting chimney breast.

The south parlor mantel has been removed but the narrow cupboards in the sides of the projecting breast are in place.

Mid 19th century farm buildings that survive include a medium sized cow barn, typical double pen granary, and meat house. All have typical frame construction with vertical board siding.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Although the Hessey House has lost some of its architectural significance due to the coating of aluminum the mid 19th century farm complex remains for the most part intact. The structures are all typical of mid 19th century construction. George W. Hessey owned the farm according to the 1877 Lake Atlas.
