This is a large composite fieldstone house of the late 18th century. The main house is 2-1/2 stories in height with a rather steeply pitched A-roof. It is three bays wide and two deep. There are corner quoins of rough dressed fieldstone. There is a central door and all the windows have 6/6 sashes. There is a chimney at each end of the main house - all the fireplaces are in the corners of the rooms. To the left of the main house is a lower 2-1/2 story A-roofed wing. It is two bays wide and has a chimney on its left end. There is a date-stone on one of the gable ends of the main house - 1791. The interior woodwork of the house is c.1930. There is an old stone ice-house on the property.

This house, typical of the 18th century fieldstone structures in Cecil County, is important because it is dated.
