C. 1865-1866

The Benjamin J. Green House is one of the few houses illustrated in the Lake, Griffing, and Stevenson Atlas of 1877. It was undoubtedly one of the most prominent houses to be seen for miles in and around Warwick, Md. In fact, it still commands much attention today above its surrounding corn fields. Green was the builder between 1864 and 1867 for Cecil County Tax Assessments list a $14,300.00 entry in 1867 while in 1864 his 260 acres were assessed for $5,460.00. (The Tax Assessments for 1865-1866 are missing) Such a large discrepancy provides enough evidence along with the architectural style of the structure for dating the second empire house to 1865-1866.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The B. J. Green House c. 1865 is a 3 story 5 bay x 1 room center hall frame house with mansard roof on the Cecilton-Warwick road just west of Warwick. The house faces south with the main gable running east/west.

The house rests on a partial fieldstone and brick foundation with basement and is covered with weatherboard siding. The mansard roof has a slate sheathing with wooden corner trim. A 2 1/2 story 4 bay by 1 room wing extends to the north to form a T-Addition. The wing is constructed the same as the front block only it has a gable roof instead of a mansard.

The south (main) facade has symmetrical fenestration with a central entrance. The heavily molded front door has two arched panels that are interrupted by bulls-eye panels 2/3 of the way down. The rectangular panels finish below. Three light sidelights with panels below and a 3 light transom frame the entrance. The 4/4 sash with plain surrounds do not retain their shutters but the pintels and shutter does remain. The heavy cornice has elaborate bracket supports and corner pilasters. The third floor is illuminated by rounded arch 2/2 sash dormers with a scrolled roof ornament. A flat roof porch extends across the five full bays with a heavy bracketed cornice and elaborately scolloed cast iron supports. The porch floor is supported by brick piers, and granite slabs serve as porch steps. One of the more distinctive characteristics of the front facade is the palladian type window in the central second floor opening. A normal 2/2 sash with an arched two pane light overhead.

The gable ends are identical with a single 4/4 sash on each floor in the northern bay and two 2/2 sash arched dormers that flank the interior end stretcher bond brick stacks.

The north side is primarily covered with the rear wing with two bays exposed on the east side.

The rear wing has shed porches which cover the first floor on both east and west sides. The east side porch has a scrolled decorative board between rough cedar posts. 6/6 sash are found on both first and second floor with an entrance in the northern most bay. The west side has a four panel door with transom light in the second bay from the north. The sash remain 6/6. There are two 2/2 gabled dormers on the west slope of the roof. Central and interior end stacks rise out of the wing.

The porch is supported by simple square piers with molded capitals.

The north end has a later first floor light and two 2/2 attic sash that flank the brick stack. Plain bargeboards close the gables.

The interior has not been changed significantly since the structures erection. The main stair has a heavily turned newel post with a continuous flat oval handrail that rises to the third floor. The balusters are also turned. The large four panel doors and molded surrounds are grained as are the elaborate Victorian mantels. The woodwork remains grained throughout the main house with plain woodwork in the rear wing.

A courtyard with boardering barn buildings remains to the north of the main house. They include a medium sized hay barn, stables, and wagon sheds.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The B. J Green house is one of the few houses illustrated in the Lake, Griffing, and Stevenson Atlas. It was undoubtedly one of the most prominent houses in the area and probably fairly new. B. J. Green had been in the country for a while according to the patron list. He supposedly came from Harford County around 1833. In 1877 he owned 266 acres along with the house.

The house is a common plan but all similarities end there. The house is one of the most elaborate third quarter of the 19th century structures with its intricate cast iron porch and mansard roof with decorative arched dormers. The interior is also unusual with its abundance of grained woodwork. The house and farm was assessed in 1867 for $14,300, but in 1860 there is no house listed which would make one believe the house was built between those two years.
