Private

1913

Built in 1913, the Sam Montgomery House is a modest two-part, two story vernacular frame dwelling with a one story hipped roof porch across the façade. Located at the corner of Friendship Landing Road and Ironsides Road, the site includes as its only surviving outbuilding a small shed roof privy. The Sam Montgomery House is significant as an example of the relatively under-documented early 20th century owner-occupied African American dwellings in Charles County. Built on a nine acre lot purchased in 1913 from the Wright family, the dwelling shows stylistic similarities with other houses associated with small landowners and tenant farmers in the area.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Built in 1913, the Samuel Montgomery House is a modest two-part, two story vernacular frame dwelling with a one story hipped roof porch across the façade. Located at the corner of Friendship Landing Road and Ironsides Road, the site includes as its only surviving outbuilding a small shed roof privy.

The frame dwelling is covered with aluminum siding, is one room deep and rests on a pier foundation. A combination of asphalt sheeting and tin cover the roof and a wide hipped roof porch, resting on five thin square posts, spans the length of the façade. Fenestration is asymmetrical and primarily consists of 6/6 light double-hung wood sash windows. A few windows have been replaced with later 2/2 light sash frames. A single brick chimney with a corbelled cap pierces the roofline.

The façade or west elevation includes two doorways, one providing access to each wing. The door in the northernmost wing is a single panel replacement, while the door in the southern wing is currently boarded over. Three windows appear in the north wing façade, one on the first floor and two above. The smaller south kitchen wing has one first floor and one second floor windows. The gable ends are without fenestration while the rear window placement mirrors that on the façade.

Though the interior was not examined, oral accounts of Sandy Posey, a local resident, describe the dwelling as having a four room plan with two rooms on the first floor and two above. The stair was located on the north wall and provided access to both second floor rooms. The south wing included the kitchen on the first floor and a sleeping chamber above.

The dwelling is currently vacant and suffers from neglect but appears to otherwise be in fair condition. Significant alterations are limited to the application of aluminum siding and a few replacement windows.

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance reports, complete evaluation on a DOE Form - see manual.)

The Sam Montgomery House is significant as an example of the relatively under-documented, early 20th century, owner-occupied African American dwelling in Charles County. Built on a nine acre lot purchased in 1913 from the Wright family, the dwelling shows stylistic similarities with other houses associated with small landowners and tenant farmers in the area.

Although little is known about Sam Montgomery and his family, according to oral accounts he was an overseer or farm manager. He had three children: a son named Henry that received a considerable amount of notoriety as a prominent Baptist minister in Washington D.C. and two daughters, Bessie and Ida. The Montgomery property eventually became parceled off to descendants, creating a distinctive African American community at the crossroads south of Friendship Landing and east of Ironsides Road. (1)
