W. T. Hubbard House
East New Market
private

c. 1850, c. 1920

The W. T. Hubbard house appears to be a well-built early twentieth-century bungalow with its broad medium pitched roof that incorporates a Tuscan columned front porch. Lighting the front room on upper floor is a large gabled dormer that is centered on the roof slope. Despite the 1920s appearance of this dwelling, the original core and several features clearly date to the mid nineteenth century. The front two-panel door with sidelights and transom is a standard Greek Revival feature as is the mantel featured in the parlor. Hubbard family tradition relates that an old house was extensively reworked during the early years of the twentieth century. Nineteenth-century brick also survives in the foundation structure of the house and exterior chimney.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The W. T. Hubbard house stands on the east side of the east fork off South Main Street in East New Market, Dorchester County, Maryland. The house faces west with the gable oriented on a north/south axis.

Originally built during the middle years of the nineteenth-century, this single-story frame house achieved its current appearance after a major reworking of the structure around 1920. Hubbard family history relates that an old house was extensively rebuilt with the new plans following the popular bungalow style. Incorporated within the rebuilt house are a few features that were evidently salvaged from the older structure.

Supported by a concrete block foundation with an excavated cellar, the foundation also includes fragments of a brick wall that were left from the earlier building. The center hall house is sheathed with aluminum siding and covered by a medium pitched asphalt shingle roof.

The story-and-a-half house has a five-bay front (west) elevation with a center entrance and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The two-panel Greek Revival style door, apparently reused from the earlier structure, is framed by six-pane sidelights and a multi-pane transom. Incorporated under the main roof slope is a Tuscan columned porch that shelters the entire front of the dwelling. Marking the center of the roof is a gabled dormer with paired six-over-six sash windows.

The south side of the house is distinguished by an exterior brick chimney with a corbelled shoulder. The chimney has been rebuilt, but the brick found at the base is clearly nineteenth-century material. To each side of the stack are French doors that open into the large south room. An adjacent six-over-six sash window lights the back room, while a pair of six-over-six sash windows illuminate the second floor. The eaves to the roof are slightly extended.

The north side of the house is marked by an asymmetrical placement of six-over-six sash windows as well as smaller windows that light the kitchen. To the back of the house and incorporated under the roof slope is a back porch.

The house interior largely dates from the early twentieth century. A quarter-turn stair is located in the center hall. A paneled square newel post and square balusters support a molded handrail. The stringer is plain. South of the hall is the main living room or parlor which is entered through a pair of French doors. Fixed on the south wall is a mid nineteenth-century style mantel with plain pilasters and a plain frieze. Framing the door and window openings is a simple colonial revival style surround. The north room or dining room is fitted with built-in glazed cupboards. The back part of the house is divided into bedrooms, a bathroom, and a kitchen, all of which are finished with early twentieth century woodwork and fixtures. Two-panel doors open into each of the rooms.

The second floor is partitioned into three bedrooms which open from a center hallway. Each of the rooms, finished with lath and plaster, are entered through two-panel doors with simple early twentieth-century surrounds.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The W. T. Hubbard house marks the south end of East New Market at the fork in South Main Street where Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church stands. The story-and-a-half frame bungalow style house includes a broad medium pitched roof which incorporated a Tuscan columned porch that stretches across the front of the dwelling. Inside the house is largely finished with early twentieth-century woodwork. Hubbard family tradition relates that the house is much older than it appears since the bungalow style appearance was achieved after a massive rebuilding of an earlier structure. In support of this claim are a few mid nineteenth-century features like the front entrance and the Greek Revival style mantel in the parlor. Also remnants of a brick foundation are found within the present concrete block cellar wall. A house is located on this site on the 1877 East New Market map under the ownership of M. S. Fletcher.
